Crime Rises In Nation But Drops Here, Barrett Says

Major Offenses Decline 5.9 Pct.; Clearance Rate Above Average

Although major crime was on the increase throughout the Nation in the calendar year 1949, it ebbed in the District during the 12-month period that ended June 30, according to Police Chief Maj. Robert J. Barrett.

In his annual report, he states that while serious felonies increased 4.5 percent nationally in 1949, the District showed a decrease of 5.9 percent for the fiscal year 1950.

The Barrett report declares that 24.6 percent of the serious felonies were committed by juveniles.

In another report made public yesterday, Juvenile Court Judge Edith H. Cockrill disclosed an increase of 10.3 percent in the number of juvenile delinquency cases here in fiscal 1950.

Barrett's report was sent recently to the District Commissioners but its contents were not disclosed until yesterday.

"Out of a total of 14,728 felonies reported, 9218 or 62.5 percent were cleared," Barrett says in his report. "This rate of clearance far exceeds the national average."

This, Barrett says, represents a four-tenths percent increase of clearances over the previous year.

During fiscal 1950, Washington police received reports of 13,057 serious felonies, classified as Part I offenses under the FBI's uniform crime reporting system.

This was a decrease of 814 serious felonies from fiscal 1949.

8116 Major Felonies Cleared

Of the 13,057 serious felonies reported, police cleared 8116 of the cases, or 59.6 percent.

This is the crime-by-crime breakdown of the serious felonies and the record of clearances:

Of 74 homicides (including nine justifiable homicides), 72 were cleared, or 95.9 percent.

Of 237 rape cases, 227 were cleared, or 94.9 percent.

Of 1241 robberies, 958, or 71.3 percent of the cases, were cleared.

Of 4349 assaults, 3655, or 82.7 percent, were cleared.

Of 3447 burglaries, only 1452, or 38.9 percent, were cleared.

Of 1965 grand larcenies, only 862, or 41 percent, were cleared.

Of 1744 auto thefts, only 890, or 49.4 percent, were cleared.

The report shows there were 1671 minor felonies (Part II offenses under the FBI system) reported during the 1950 fiscal year of which 1459, or 85.3 percent, were marked "cleared."

Arrests Up 6.7 Percent

Thus, all felonies reported totaled 14,728, of which police cleared 9575, or 62.5 percent.

Arrests jumped, too, from 239,593 in fiscal 1949 to 256,904—an increase of 6.7 percent.

Barrett yesterday offered six factors which he thinks have been instrumental in bringing about the crime decrease.

They are: The high rate of clearance, prompt clearance of cases, extra men on the street, extra headquarters cruisers patrolling the city, good teamwork between the uniformed force and the detective bureau, and the imposition of stiffer sentences in the courts.

In his report, Barrett cautions that "it is imperative that the department continue to add sufficient members to its force to permit maintenance of a thorough patrol of the city at all times."

Wire-Tap Jury Gets Statement By Grunewald

FBI Outsteps Fay In Serving Subpena On 'Missing' Witness

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Henry W. (The Dutchman) Grunewald, who for weeks was the target of a hectic subpena race, testified for two hours yesterday before the Federal grand jury investigating wire tapping.

His appearance climaxed a contest between the FBI and Martin Fay, counsel of the Senate subcommittee investigating wire tapping, to see who would be the first to slap a subpena on Grunewald. It was the FBI who got their man first at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday at The Plains, Va.

Three monthes ago, Grunewald, a 58-year-old dapper ex-boxer, gave a statement to the FBI about the Brewster wire tapping case and disappeared.

Then, in Senate testimony, he was reportedly named as the intermediary between Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) and Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon during the 1947 Senate investigation of airplane magnate Howard Hughes. Shimon was accused of tapping wires during the probe.

Meanwhile, the Federal grand jury, without Grunewald's testimony, declined to indict in the Brewster case.

And all the time, no one could find Grunewald, the so-called "missing link," in the case.

In answer to the FBI-served subpena, Grunewald made his appearance yesterday at 1:30 p. m. in Municipal Court, where the grand jury sits. He was accompanied by his lawyer, William Power Ma-

N.Y. Nominates Dewey, Lynch For Governor

GOP Picks Hanley To Oppose Lehman For Senate Seat

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP).—Thomas E. Dewey was nominated by Republicans today for a third term as Governor of New York and Representative Walter A. Lynch of the Bronx was picked by Democrats as his opponent.

Lynch, 56, a member of Congress since 1940 and a champion of President Truman's Fair Deal, won the nomination on the first roll call of a State Democratic convention in Rochester that was loaded with delegates lukewarm over the choice.

Dewey, the two-time unsuccessful Republican Presidential standard bearer, was nominated by acclamation at a tumultuous GOP convention in Saratoga Springs.

The 48-year-old Dewey, who only four days ago reversed his decision of June 17 to retire and return to private law practice, was in full control of the Republican conclave.

He made a dramatic and unprecedented convention floor appearance to place before delegates the name of his Lieutenant Governor, Joe R. Hanley, as the GOP candidate for the United States Senate.

Hanley, who minutes later personally placed Dewey's name in nomination, received the senatorial candidacy by acclamation in a wild demonstration.

The 74-year-old Hanley's opponent in the November 7 election will be the Democratic incumbent, Herbert H. Lehman, who is 72.

It was Hanley—reluctant and disappointed—who last Saturday bowed out of GOP gubernatorial

Truman Signs Bill Allowing Second Area Civilian Airport

President Truman yesterday signed the bill authorizing a second civilian airport in the Washington area.

The legislation, spurred through Congress on the heels of two air disasters adjacent to National Airport last fall, set the cost of the new terminal at more than $14,000,000.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration has asked the Senate Appropriations Committee to include $2,100,000 in the pending supplemental supply bill for preliminary planning and site acquisition this year.

Meanwhile, a high CAA spokesman hinted that the airport might be located farther from Washington than Annandale, Va., the site most frequently mentioned in the past.

He emphasized some Arlington and Fairfax County residents are opposed to having added air traffic so close to National airport.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) sponsored an amendment to the airport bill directing that nearby planning officials be consulted prior to final site selection.

The official also pointed out that the "air traffic angle is more important than saving air passengers a few minutes driving time."

He hinted sites a few miles beyond Annandale, near Shirley Highway, would receive serious study. The site decision, he said, probably will not be reached until December.

The CAA does not expect the new airport to be ready for even partial operation until 1954 or 1955.

Virginia Due To Call Up Youths of 20

22-Year-Olds Face November Draft Here; Maryland Nears 21 Bracket

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Commonwealth of Virginia may have to call up 20-year-old youths to meet its November draft quota, it was learned yesterday.

Col. Asher W. Harman, State Selective Service director, estimated that Virginia would have to dig deep into its reservoir of 1-A's to produce enough men able to pass the Army's preinduction tests. Virginia's quota is 1087 for September, 1090 for October, and 1491 for November.

The November call for draftees will probably reach into the 21-year-olds in Maryland, and hit the bottom of the 22-year-olds in the District. Maryland's quotas are 735, September; 739, October; 1013, November. The District must produce 252 men fit for induction in September; 248 in October; 342 in November.

Tests Worry Harman

Harman yesterday expressed concern over the large number of 1-A's being turned down by the Army for failure to pass the mental exams. He said that the State's over-all rejection rate is running at 60 percent—roughly the National average—but that three out of four of the rejections are due to the mental qualification test.

The District is also running at a 60-percent rejection rate, according to Frank D. Norton, deputy Selective Service director. Statistics here show that four out of seven men rejected fail the mental tests. Norton emphasized that most of the men failing the mental exam also have some physical disqualification.

Maryland's rejection rate is comparatively low, around 52 percent, according to Col. Henry C. Stanwood, State draft director. He estimates that only about 15 percent of the rejections are attributable to the mental qualification tests.

Man Who Overslept Sworn In

Six Washington area men were inducted into the Army at Arlington Farms yesterday. Among the inductees was 25-year-old Earl Smith, of 408 Oakdale pl. nw., who was scheduled for induction with the District's first Korean war draft contingent Wednesday. Smith, it appears, overslept when his alarm clock failed to go off. Instead of showing up at the Army's recruiting station here at 7:30 a. m., he put in an appearance at 1 p. m. at Selective Service headquarters. He was reprimanded, and inducted yesterday alone.

The other area men inducted yesterday, all 23 and from Maryland, are: James E. Porter, 4902 Forty-ninth ave., Edmonston; Luke B. Edwards, 3913 Wallace rd., Brentwood; Lawrence S. House, 6216 Forty-third st., Hyattsville; William J. Cecil jr., 4004 Madison st., Hyattsville; Leonard J. Smith, Beltsville.

U. N. Rejects Soviet Bomb Raid Protest

Move Smothered After U. S. Blasts Red Korean Slaying Of War Prisoners

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Sept. 7 (U.P.).—The United Nations Security Council today smothered a Soviet resolution to outlaw American bombing of Korean populated areas.

The one-sided vote came after the United States sharply attacked the North Koreans for hiding military moves behind civilian disguises and for shooting war prisoners.

In an all-day session that produced repeated tiffs between the Soviet and Western power delegates, the Council took these other decisions on the Asian crisis:

1. Accepted a United States proposal to switch the order of business so that Communist China's complaint that American planes violated Manchurian territory would be taken up before the Peiping charge of United States aggression against Formosa.

2. Accepted a Soviet move to give priority in debate on the Manchurian incident to a Soviet proposal calling for invitation of a Chinese Communist delegate to the Council table. The United States had insisted on priority for its own resolution to name a committee of two—India and Sweden—to investigate the plane incident on the spot.

Vote Is Significant

The vote on the Soviet move was significant in that it marked the first time the needed seven votes have ever been mustered in the Council behind any proposal aimed at bringing the Communist Chinese to the U. N.

However, the move was on a minor technical issue and observers considered it still doubtful whether the majority could be mustered on the more material point of actually issuing an invitation to Peiping to join discussion of the United States inquiry proposal.

The United States admitted last week that one of its planes "may have" strayed into Manchuria by mistake and offered to pay damages if an inquiry proved this to be true.

The Council adjourned debate on whether to invite a Peiping envoy until Monday afternoon. It will meet in closed session Friday morning to resume discussion of its report to the forthcoming General Assembly.

The Soviet resolution against "inhuman, barbarous bombing" by United States forces in Korea drew only one supporting vote—Russia's—while nine council members voted against it and Yugoslavia abstained.

The vote followed a blistering speech by American Delegate Ernest A. Gross in which he charged that it was the North Koreans who were waging inhuman warfare.

Gross contrasted the "care and solicitude" of U. N. forces in warning Korean civilians to evac-

'Real Motive Political'

Red Charges of Schoeppel Bitterly Denied by Chapman

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In a bitter and battling mood, Secretary of Interior Oscar L. Chapman yesterday denied the charges of Communist associations made against him by Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel (R., Kans.).

Chapman told a Senate committee, with Schoeppel present, that the Senator's "real motive is political and nothing else."

He challenged Schoeppel, and dared him to repeat his remarks—made in a speech Tuesday on the Senate floor—without the cloak of congressional immunity. Staring straight at the Kansas Republican, Chapman said the accusations "far surpass, in viciousness, in venality, and in utter falsity, any that have ever been made against me."

They could be dismissed, Chapman said, as "malicious and irresponsible."

Then, with documentation on most of them, he entered into a detailed denial of each accusation Schoeppel made.

In his speech, Schoeppel made assertions that, he said, "show conclusively the strong and close personal alliance between the Russian Soviet cause and the present Secretary of the Interior."

He charged Chapman with membership in or association with several Communist-front organizations, and insinuated that Chapman refused to make an affidavit denying Communist affiliation until a year after he was sworn in as Undersecretary of Interior. Schoeppel also said Chapman made a "deal" to employ Randolph Feltus to lobby for Alaskan statehood, and noted that Feltus had recently been a registered agent of the Polish government.

Senator O'Mahoney, (D., Wyo., chairman of the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, convened his group at once to investigate the charges, inviting Schoeppel to attend.

While Chapman testified at its opening session yesterday morning, President Truman, in his weekly press conference, predicted that Chapman would explode the attacks against him into little bits—as other attacks, Mr. Truman said, had been exploded before.

The best evidence on the accuracy of the President's prediction seemed to come from the fact that when Chapman finished his testimony, no Republican on the Senate committee challenged him, or even asked him any substantive questions.

Schoeppel himself had no questions to put, and confined himself to reminding O'Mahoney that he had asked for a delay in the com-

Acheson, Johnson Attacked

Truman Eats Words and Wins Ovation From Marine League

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

President Truman and the Marine Corps League publicly kissed and made up yesterday, but the league later prepared to ask for replacement of the President's two chief aides.

The President paid a surprise visit to the Marine Corps League convention yesterday at 9:45 a. m. To the rather amazed officers and 200 delegates, who did not expect the fact-to-face meeting, he grinningly admitted:

"When I make a mistake, I try to correct it."

Members of the league, who denounced him the day before for calling the Marines a Navy police force and labeling them propagandists, gave him a roaring ovation for admitting his error.

League Commandant Clyde Nixon said later he considered Mr. Truman a "fine fellow personally." He added that he was "perfectly satisfied" with the President's apology for the "language' he used about the Marines.

However, the League's committee on resolutions yesterday afternoon voted to recommend replacement of Secretary of Defense Johnson with a "competent and far-sighted statesman."

Committee members also recommended in the resolution that

Korean Aid Plan Proposed By Acheson

Effort Would Be Made by U. N. After 'Crushing' Aggression

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson proposed yesterday launching a relief and reconstruction effort in Korea, under United Nations auspices, as soon as the North Korean aggression has been "crushed."

He also called for a reconciliation of North and South Koreans, and hinted that after the war the United Nations should try again to unify the country.

The Secretary spoke extemporaneously to members of the national citizens' committee for United Nations Day, of which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is chairman.

It was the first time he had discussed the future of Korea, even in general terms, since the present war began.

He insisted that "the first task which has to be done in Korea is to crush the aggression."

"But that is by no means the end," he went on. "There are great constructive tasks to be carried out in Korea: relief and reconstruction after this terrible war. There will be the period, as Lincoln expressed it, of binding up the nation's wounds.

Task for U. N.

"There will be the period when the United Nations, as the great sponsor of Korea, will have to do everything it can to reconcile the bitterness which have grown out of this struggle, and to bring Koreans together without bitterness so that they can go and build up the country . . ."

The task of the United Nations everywhere, he said, was to bring people together, to ease tensions, and to open to all peoples "a fuller life, a happier life, a life freer from the burden of disease and poverty . . ."

"That is the great ambition and the great task of the United Nations," he declared. "All of those things it must do in Korea. Korea is the workshop in which the

5 Air Groups From Guard Will Be Called

District Squadron And Headquarters Unit Not Included

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Air Force announced yesterday it would call five National Guard Groups into Federal service in the near future.

These units will be the first combat groups of the Air National Guard activated during the present emergency. Some radar units and other ground organizations already have been called.

The call will activate four fighter-bomber groups and one tactical reconnaissance group, a total of 15 to 20 squadrons. The Air Force would not identify the units to be called or reveal from what States they would be drawn.

It was learned, however, that the District's 121st Fighter Squadron or its 113th Fighter Ground Headquarters have not been alerted. The 113th Fighter Group includes, besides the 121st Fighter Squadron, the 104th from Baltimore, the 149th from Richmond, Va., and the 142d from Newcastle, Del.

These units, equipped with jet fighters, are organized and trained to intercept enemy aircraft. They could be adapted if necessary to serve as fighter-bombers.

There are no tactical reconnaissance units in the District area.

Moth Keeps TV Station Off Air for 1 Hour

BALTIMORE, Sept. 7 (AP).—A moth put television station WAAM-TV off the air for an hour today.

Tubes blew out, fuses popped, and a flash of high voltage electricity welded solid the vibrating contacts of a relay.

Charles Blair, an engineer, finally found the wrecked relay and the charred remains of the moth. It had flown into the maze of tubes, wires, resistors and relays, causing a short when it passed at just the right instant through the gap in a high voltage circuit.

Calls It Worse Than Mundt-Nixon

Truman Not to Sign McCarran Bill to Control Communists

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman said yesterday that he wouldn't sign the McCarran anti-Communist bill now before the Senate. He said it was a revision of the old Mundt-Nixon bill, made a little worse.

Mr. Truman, talking at a news conference, said he thought the Americans and their allies in Korea would straighten out the battle line and regain their former positions before the week is out. He said that the Korean Communists had crashed through the line in certain places, but that this had brought no material change in the front.

The President explained that this was his opinion, after being briefed by Gen. Omar N. Bradley. He said he was not a desk strategist and didn't intend to become one.

At the outset of the news conference, a reporter asked Mr. Truman how he felt, having in mind the fact that he had just been before the Marine Corps League at the Statler and had won an ovation.

"Do you feel better now than you did yesterday morning?" the reporter said.

Oh, said Mr. Truman, he always felt good, always was physically fit. If anybody didn't believe it, he said amidst laughter, then let him come up and have a try.

Asked later whether he considered the Marine Corps "incident"

Reds' Attack Loses Force; Taegu Front Again Quiet

BULLETIN

WITH THE U. S. FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION, KOREA, Sept. 8 (AP).—A regiment of the First Cavalry Division pushed off before daybreak today to dislodge the Reds from a high hill 7 miles north of Taegu. By midday, the first objective was taken.

TOKYO (Friday), Sept. 8 (AP). — Hard-fighting United Nations forces today stalled the big Korean Red offensive along a 50-mile front from north of Taegu to the east coast.

At the south end of the battle perimeter, American troops ousted the Reds from Battle Mountain, a strategic height, and regained all positions lost yesterday.

A U. S. Eighth Army spokesman in Korea told Associated Press Correspondent Jack Macbeth that the 80,000-man Communist drive loosed Monday on the north front had run out of steam.

The high tide of the Red push was believed to be a point seven miles north of Taegu.

The spokesman said eight enemy divisions manned the north front—the Fifth, Eighth, 12th and 15th on the northeast; the 13th and First attacking due north of Taegu; the Third northwest of Taegu and the 10th west of Taegu.

Asked why the offensive has slowed up, the spokesman replied: "We believe they are running out of ammunition, supplies, men and other things necessary to press an attack."

This front, where the Reds made a breakthrough which put Taegu in such peril that foxholes were dug in the city, was reported quieter Thursday night and early Friday morning than it has been for several days.

Allies Still Holding Yongchon

The vital supply road east out of Taegu early today was open only to Hayang, 13 miles away. Red infiltrators were being engaged east of Hayang.

In the critical Yongchon sector, 20 miles northeast of Taegu, United Nations troops fought a few miles east of the vital highway junction.

Yongchon, where Red guerillas infiltrated Tuesday then were ousted, is the key to Taegu's defense. Yongchon last was reported still in Allied hands, American officers have said its loss would make Taegu untenable.

South Korean troops who gave up the port city of Pohang Tuesday night and fell back three miles were reported holding off the Communists from the air base, six miles southeast of Pohang. The air base, also defended by Americans, was still in use by transport planes bringing in supplies.

The Red breakthrough Monday was made against the South Korean capital division south of Kigye, nine miles inland from Pohang. One prong pushed 15 miles south and west to near Yongchon, another rolled more than 10 miles south to near Kyongju.

South Koreans Reorganized

Today the United States Eighth Army spokesman said the South Korean forces which buckled in the Yongchon-Pohang area have been reorganized.

"They once again are effective," he said.

On the southern front, defending the lifeline port of Pusan, Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton said U. S. 25th Division troops today regained Battle Moun-

Three Area Soldiers Killed in Korea

Three Washington area GIs—all veterans of World War II—have been killed in Korea.

Listed on Defense Department Casualty List 88 are Sergt. Robert H. Pressler, son of Mrs. Rose Pressler, 1-B Crescent rd., Greenbelt; Sergt. Arnold Meier, who was stationed at Fort Myer, and Corpl. Harold G. Ingram, son of Mrs. Marion Ingram, 941 O st. nw.

Sergeant Meier, 44, a native of Bremen, Germany, who has no known relatives in this country, was reported seriously wounded on July 20, according to a friend, Miss Lottie Alexander, 1011 S. Scott st., Arlington. The Defense Department later divulged he died of his injuries the same day.

Served in South Pacific

A soldier for many years, Meier served 30 months with the artillery in the South Pacific during World War II, Miss Alexander said. He was first stationed at Fort Myer in 1929 and became acquainted with her father, John J. Alexander, when they were both stationed there in 1933. Miss Alexander lives with her mother at the S. Scott st. address. Her father reenlisted in the Army several weeks ago.

Sergeant Pressler, a soldier since 1941, was killed by rifle fire from ambush about 2 miles west of Chingu, according to a letter his captain wrote his mother.

A native of Washington, Pa., Pressler attended school and worked in a glass factory there before entering the service.

He saw action in Normandy, the Rhine and Central Europe campaigns during World War II, receiving the Purple Heart medal. He served two and a half years in Japan after World War II and then was returned to the United States and was stationed at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., for a year and a half. He returned to Japan in February of this year.

Besides his mother, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Sara Cookson, of the Crescent rd. address; and a brother, A. W. Pressler, Grafton, W. Va.

Corp. Ingram entered the Army in 1943, according to his mother. He served 18 months in the Pacific during World War II, she said.

Born and raised in Washington, Corp. Ingram was married about two years ago. His wife, Silvia A. Ingram, and his baby daughter, Jacqueline, are now living in Concord, N. C.

His wife had been living with him in Tacoma, Washington, until he was sent overseas to Korea, Mrs. Ingram said.

'I'll Be Pushing the Reds'

The last letter Mrs. Ingram received from him was written while he was en route overseas. In it he said, "by the time you get this I guess I'll be . . . pushing the Reds over back behind the thirty-eighth parallel."

Besides his mother, wife and daughter, Ingram is survived by two brothers and four sisters.

Seven Washington area men have now been reported killed in action in Korea. Thirty-one have been wounded and 14 are missing.

Casualty list 88 also listed Sergt. Charles E. Carbaugh, husband of Mrs. Esther R. Carbaugh, Frederick, Md., as injured.

682 Servicemen Killed As of September 1

As of September 1, a total of 682 servicemen had been listed as killed in Korea, the Defense Department announced yesterday.

The casualty summary, based on notification of next of kin, listed 8957 total casualties, of which 8244 were of the Army. The Marine Corps followed with 589 casualties and the Air Force and Navy has 96 and 28 respectively.

The breakdown on deaths is as follows: Army, 534; Marine Corps, 109; Air Force, 29; and Navy, 10. A total of 5366 men have been wounded in action and 2848 are currently missing.

Insp. Fondahl Named Head Of District's Civil Defense

Inspector John Fondahl, 52, yesterday was named acting director of the District's civil defense. clerk of the Police Department, clerk of the police department, has been active in preliminary phases of defense planning, begun last March. He will now devote full time to the job at temporary defense headquarters in the District building. He will continue to be paid out of police funds.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, announced that Capt. Charles Sullivan of the Third Precinct will become acting chief clerk and an acting inspector as replacement for Fondahl.

The shift will advance Lieut. Henry H. Heflin of the Third Precinct to an acting captaincy there.

Major Barrett also announced the transfer of Capt. Basil F. McAllister from command of the Tenth Precinct to headquarters, of Capt. Thomas Rasmusen from Central Communications and Records to the Tenth Precinct, and Lieut. John E. Winters from the Third Precinct to communications.

Inspector Fondahl, first member of the police force to be called to the colors in August, 1940, was a lieutenant colonel with the Fourth Marine Division. He also served in World War I.

He was appointed to the police force in 1923, serving both as a motorcycle and horse officer. Inspector Fondahl is a graduate of the FBI school for police officers. He was promoted to his present rank last spring. He could not be reached for comment on his new asignment yesterday.

The District's defense program so far has been stalled for want of an appropriation to finance planning. The Commissioners requested $290,000 for a starter in the supplemental appropriation bill, but the amount was slashed to $30,000 by House action. That figure would permit only paper planning for the city's defense.

First Local Medical Reserve Outfit Ordered to Active Duty

The 382d Evacuation Hospital, first local medical reserve unit to be called up, has been ordered to report Monday to Fort Myer, Va., for active duty.

The unit, comprising personnel for a 400-bed hospital, is expected to leave for the West Coast within 10 days after reporting. Col. Raymond Maret, 4705 Hunt ave., Chevy Chase, Md., is commander of the 382d.

The unit includes more than 28 nurses, 20 doctors, two dentists and a chaplain.

A veteran of four years service in World War II, Colonel Maret announced yesterday that vacancies exist in the unit for enlisted men with previous medical experience. Volunteers wll be interviewed at the hospital's headquarters, 2123 C st. nw., today and Saturday from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Elsewhere on the mobilization front in Washington, the Marine Corps enlisted one man and accepted two new recruits

Ten men were enlisted at the local Army recruiting office, and one by the Air Force. Eleven volunteers were qualified by the Army and Air Force and will be enlisted today.

At Fort Belvoir, Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) yesterday visited the 116th Engineer Combat Battalion of the Idaho National Guard.

The Senator was accompanied by Brig. Gen. William H. Abdenroth, commander of the D. C. National Guard.

Larson Urges Appropriation For Dispersal

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The $139,800,000 plan to begin decentralizing the Government as a precaution against enemy attack in the capital was laid before the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday.

General Services Administrator Jess Larson and his staff spent two hours before the committee, seeking to have the money put in the supplement appropriation bill. Congress cannot quit until the bill is passed since it carries important military funds.

No committee vote on the dispersal plan is expected until next week. But a check of members after the closed-door session indicated these things:

1. That there is a general sentiment that some dispersal steps soon must be taken to avoid the chance that the Federal Government might be knocked out by a single atom bomb.

2. That some Senators feel that perhaps the plan to establish four of a potential 10 satellite Government building areas in Maryland and Virginia may not be dispersal enough. Some Senators talked of moving parts of the Government, or even all of it, hundreds of miles from Washington.

More Thought Wanted

3. That some feel the dispersal idea hasn't yet been thought out enough to make a decision this quickly and the matter should wait until the new Congress in January while others consider such delay dangerous to National security. It would take more than a year to build the eight proposed buildings.

4. That the dispersal program has backing from some on the score that new office space is undoubtedly necessary because of the mobilization program and hence the sensible thing to do is to tear down the temporary buildings on the Mall and erect permanent ones at the dispersal points.

Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) said he had no comment. One Republican Senator who asked that his name not be used said he thought "there was a general feeling that there ought to be a little more consideration than we can give it at this session."

Open-Minded

Senator John L. McClelland (D., Ark.) said his first reaction was "do we have to do that now" and then added that "maybe we have to." He said he has an open mind on the plan.

Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), who usually heads the Appropriations Subcommittee handling District matters, said "we ought to proceed with a dispersal program."

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) said he felt some program is necessary but added that he had "reservations as to whether this is the best thing to do."

Army Explains X-Ray Costs to House Unit

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

An Army representative testified here yesterday that, while the Army protected itself against "elevator" costs in physical examinations, it did not do so for X-rays.

Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, Army deputy surgeon general, made the explanation to a House armed forces subcomittee investigating reports that doctors averaged as high as $1100 a day X-raying Army inductees.

The witness, however, sought to justify the $5-a-man X-ray payment rate on the grounds that commercial firms pay that much on a mass basis, and individuals pay $10 or $15 for the same examinations.

At the same public hearing, John J. Anderson, administrator of the Arlington, Va., Hospital, testified his hospital netted $5355 for inductee X-ray examinations, in August alone.

He added, however, that the county hospital may have lost even more than that in "community prestige" because of the "unfavorable publicity."

Former supporters of the hospital, he told the investigative committee, now think the hospital is self-supporting.

Anderson said Arlington Hospital "never did and doesn't now want to make money out of the Army." The Army, he said, set the rate without negotiations, and the hospital agreed to "do anything within our limits that the military services asked."

Anderson produced statistics to show that the hospital cleared but 60 cents a man on the $3 allowed for X-ray taking, but netted the full $2 a man allowed for the X-ray interpretation "because of our favorable position."

He explained that the hospital radiologist, Dr. W. A. Baench, and his assistant are in salaried positions, and get nothing extra for the Army work.

At the prompting of Representative Melvin Price, (D., Ill.), Anderson said hospital officials "would be happy" to talk over a $1-a-man price reduction with Army representatives. The $1 a man, it was explained, is what the hospital would have to pay its radiologist on the usual "fifty-fifty" agreements in force in many hospitals.

Anderson said Arlington Hospital is examining the local inductees at the rate of about 2000 a month. Besides the X-ray and interpretation fees, the hospital gets $2 a man for making blood tests.

General Armstrong, in discussing cost limitations in physical examinations (excepting X-ray) said civilian doctors are paid $5 an examination up to a $25-a-day limit. If one doctor examines 25 men in one day, he still gets only $25, the witness explained.

Justifying the $5 rate, General Armstrong told the subcommittee members that Doctors Hospital here charges $15 for a chest examination, X-ray and its interpretation, and that the Alexandria, Va., Hospital charges $10.

Despite the publicity given the contracts, General Armstrong said, the Army, "as far as I know," has made no attempt to adjust the contracts downward.

Yesterday's hearing was called by Representative Paul J. Kilday (D., Tex.) the subcommitte chairman, to investigate press reports of doctors making huge daily fees for X-raying Army inductees. A Milwaukee doctor reportedly made $22,500 in less than a month, and an Omaha doctor was reported making $450 a day on the X-ray work.

Defending the Milwaukee and Omaha doctors, General Armstrong said they served without pay as Army X-ray consultants and did the X-ray work at the $5 rate "before Korea."

Moscow Public's Ire Aimed at U. S. Heads

'Blurted Out' Aims

Izvestia Hits Matthews, MacArthur

By Eddy Gilmore

MOSCOW, Sept. 7 (AP).—The destruction of a Soviet bomber in Korea Bay was the biggest topic of conversation among Russians in Moscow today and resentment against American leaders appeared to be rising.

Feeling was already running high against the United States Government and military commanders in Korea, especially over the bombing of Korean objectives. Dispatches published here have stressed civilian casualties and the destruciton of homes in these forays.

All Moscow newspapers printed today the Soviet government's charge that the two-engined Russian bomber shot down was the victim of an unprovoked attack by 11 United States fighter planes. The text was carried under black headlines saying "Protest of the Soviet government to the United States Government." There was no immediate editorial comment, but the case created a stir among the public.

The Soviet government's official position that the Korean war resulted from aggression by the United States and the South Koreans is reflected among the Soviet people. The people do not believe that the action against the North Koreans is by United Nations Forces. They see it as an action by the United States principally, plus anyone else the Americans can get to participate.

Line Followed by Malik

(This is the line followed by Soviet Delegate Jacob Malik in the Security Council. Censorship and such measures as jamming of the radio Voice of America prevents the Russian people from being widely informed about non-Communist views of the war, which the Security Council attributed from the first to aggression by the Communist North Korean invaders.)

The loss of the Soviet plane and its three-man crew on what the Soviet note described as a training flight from Port Arthur to the Korea Bay island of Haiyang (Hai-Yun-Tao) is obviously not going to improve relations between Moscow and Washington.

In all this condemnation of the United States, one hears no criticism of the American people. The criticism is centered on such figures as President Truman, Secretary of State Acheson, various military men, bankers, industrialists and, of course, "Wall Street." The Russians appear to feel the American people are being led toward war.

Think War Will Not Come

However, he Russian people still seem to believe war is going to be averted somehow, some way, and certainly express hope that it will. This correspondent does not recall ever having heard any Soviet citizen suggest that the U. S. S. R. should go to war against the United States. Likewise, one does not hear the people talking about war being inevitable.

MOSCOW, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—The official newspaper Izvestia said today that Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in his statement on Formosa, and Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, in his speech on "preventive war," had "blurted out" the real aims of the United States.

(President Truman asked MacArthur to withdraw his statement in which the general said Formosa was an integral link in America's Pacific defenses and the State Department disavowed Matthews' speech urging a "preventive war.")

A six-column article by Soviet Writer M. Mikhailov was headlined "unbridled warmongers" and said MacArthur's and Matthews' views were practically identical with President Truman's, Secretary of State Dean Acheson's and other leading Americans.

In Izvestia's first comment on the two incidents it pointed out that both men escaped with mild, friendly reprimands and "both continue holding high government posts enabling them to influence considerably government policy."

Cynical Hypocrisy

"Would this be possible if MacArthur's views did not actually correspond with the views of the United States government and its chiefs?" Izvestia asked.

Mikhailov scored what he called the President's and Acheson's cynical hypocrisy in ostensibly disagreeing with MacArthur and Matthews and said Defense Minister Louis Johnson repeatedly expressed the same ideas as Matthewes.

MacArthur and Matthews simply "blurted out the real plans and intentions of the United States," Izvestia said, with MacArthur planning to seize Formosa "so the United States could rule without control and command all Asiatic ports from Vladivostok to Singapore."

No Difference With MacArthur

The article cited American newspaper comment to the effect there is no difference between MacArthur and the Government as shown by President Truman's June 27 declaration (ordering the United States Seventh Fleet to defend Formosa.)

As for Matthews, Izvestia said: "Disregarding the State Department's chatter of the United States love of peace, the Secretary of the Navy seized the bull by the horns, crossed t's and dotted i's and with full knowledge of the subject made it understood the United States was preparing an aggressive war under the screen of peace talk."

Izvestia said Matthews represents a group of men influential in Washington favoring preventive war and listed among them President Truman, Harold Stassen, Defense Secretary Johnson, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and the commander of the American Legion, George N. Craig.

2 U. S. Navy Corsairs Shot Down Red Plane

By The Associated Press

The Navy acknowledged yesterday that two of its fighter planes shot down the Russian bomber off Korea on Monday.

This was the first official word that American planes knocked off the twin-engined Soviet craft when, the United States charges, it attempted to attack United Nations naval forces.

At the time the incident was first reported the State Department said the bomber "opened fire upon a U. N. fighter patrol, which returned its fire and shot it down."

A Navy spokesman at a briefing session for newsmen in the Pentagon identified the fighter planes as two Navy Corsairs attached to Task Force 77, composed of carriers and supporting units.

He said the Navy had no information that would support the Moscow claim that two other Russian planes were in the vicinity or that 11 American fighters took part in the brief fight. Moscow also contended the destroyed bomber was on a training flight and was unarmed.

The Navy spokesman said the action took place about 30 miles from the center of the task force. The State Department announcement of the incident had said the bomber passed over a screening ship and continued toward the center of the formation "in hostile manner."

The Navy's report cleaned up previous indications that British forces might have been involved.

Victims of Red Atrocities

French Seize 266 in Red Raids; 80 From Iron Curtain Nations

PARIS, Sept. 7 (NYHT).—The Surete Nationale, the FBI of France, today directed the arrest of 266 foreign Communists in the biggest drive against subversive agents launched since the end of the war.

There were 80 Russians or citizens of satellite countries among the total number whose activities, according to Minister of Interior Henri Queuille, had placed "in peril French internal and exterior security."

Sixteen of "the 80 Russian or so-called Popular Democracy citizens," as the official communique described them, were immediately expelled to the Soviet occupation zone in Germany. The action should warn others intending to misuse republican hospitality in France, said Queuille.

Queuille announced that all those sought in the dramatic police operation that started in the predawn hours in all parts of France had not been apprehended. Some still are being hunted.

Coincident with the vast roundup designed "to decapitate the fifth columns constituted by foreign Communist parties installed in France," informed sources reported that the government also was preparing to use strong pressure against the French Communist Party.

Communist newspapers have for a long time flagrantly abused the government war against Indo-Chinese Communists. It has advocated direct action against the arrival of Atlantic pact arms.

This activity, it was rumored, may soon result in penalties under laws not yet strictly enforced.

Of the persons thus far seized, 160 were Spaniards, and the Ministry of Interior announced in connection with their arrest that the Spanish Communist Party in France, several front organizations and the Spanish Communist newspaper Mundo Obrero all had been suppressed.

It appeared that at least some of the Communists were wanted for questioning in connection with the alleged spy system that Spanish exiles are said to have been operating against France for the Soviet Union.

The responsible newspaper Le Monde announced yesterday that three recent murders have been linked to the alleged espionage network. Its headquarters are reported to have been at Toulouse, in southern France.

Among the Nationals arrested were Bulgars, Czechs, Italians, Poles, and Yugoslavs. While these individuals had nothing much to fear from deportation to their native lands, it was a different case with the Spaniards. The Ministry of Interior admitted that expulsion to Franco Spain would mean certain death for the Spanish Communists.

Ministry officials said it was likely that such persons not requiring further detention or investigation would be given a fixed residence in one certain town and be forbidden to leave it.

Chinese Scientist, About to Depart, Held in California

Los Angeles, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Dr. Hsue-shen Tsien, Chinese aeronautical research scientist at California Institute of Technology, has been arrested as a Communist, it was disclosed today.

Federal agents last month seized eight cases of scientific papers from him as he was about to leave the United States for Red China.

The immigration service revealed the Chinese alien, who is head of the California Institute of Technology's Daniel and Florence Guggenheim jet propulsion center, was taken into custody yesterday at his Altadena, Calif., home.

An immigration service spokesman indicated that criminal charges against Tsien, a noted aerodynamic engineer, may develop out of the case.

Planes Hit 52 Tanks Of Enemy in 30 Hours

TOKYO, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—United Nations planes lashed at North Korean tanks, gun emplacements, troop concentrations and vehicle convoys on a 24-hour-a-day schedule today.

Pilots reported 12 enemy tanks destroyed or damaged in today's early flights, bringing the total knocked out to 52 in about 30 hours.

B-26 light bombers, F-80 jets, Marine Corps Corsairs, F-82 twin Mustangs and F-51 Mustangs including those of the Royal Australian Air Force were in the air all day.

B-26s and night fighters took over the attack at dusk, the B-26s striking at enemy road convoys by the light of parachute flares which they dropped.

The U. N. planes concentrated on the enormous build-ups in men, armor and supplies behind the northern front.

The planes had claimed 40 enemy tanks knocked out Wednesday—19 destroyed and 21 damaged—and it was hoped today's total might rival that record.

The tiny South Korean Air Force, which had not been in the air since the early days of the war, was ordered out to join the allied air fleet and put four F-51 Mustang fighters over the southern front.

The B-26s early today caught a convoy of 100 enemy vehicles moving down the highway toward Yongchon on the east central front. Using a new technique, the B-26s dropped parachute flares on both sides of the convoy while the other planes attacked with rockets, bombs and machine guns. The convoy was brought to a halt when forward vehicles were damaged and the planes continued the strike in waves.

B-29 Superfortresses dropped 190 tons of bombs on an iron plant at Chongjin on the east coast of North Korea and another 70 tons on key bridges and transportation lines.

Hess Again Leads So. Korean Fliers On Fighting Front

ON THE MASAN FRONT IN SOUTH KOREA (Friday), Sept. 8 (AP).—The South Korean Air Force is back in action with an American air ace, Maj. Dean Hess, in the lead plane.

Two South Korean planes, accompanied by two planes flown by Americans, made their first training flight in Mustang fighter-bombers Thursday, it was announced today.

D. C. Major Leads Assault And Rescues Isolated Troops

By Stanley Swinton

WITH U. S. 25TH DIVISION, Korea Sept. 7, (AP).—Counterattacking American infantrymen today linked up with survivors of a cutoff Negro infantry company. And they closed three quarters of a big gap torn in American lines this morning by a Red Korean battalion.

Major DeChow

By dusk, infantry led by Maj. George H. De Chow, 2745 Woodley pl. nw., Washington, D. C., had recaptured all lost ground except battle mountain.

Battle mountain is a commanding peak two miles west of burnt out Haman. The mountain has changed hands nine times in two weeks.

Lt. Col. J. T. Corley, Brooklyn, much decorated First Armored Division veteran who has taken command of a famous Negro regiment, personally directed the counterattack after his men gave ground. The predawn Communist attack was preceded by an intense mortar barrage.

Tanks commanded by Lieut. Col. W. S. Dolvin, Greensboro, Ga., pounded the mountain with high explosive shells a few hundred yards above the advancing infantry. Then the tanks began shooting armor piercing (AP) shells. "The AP whines and the noise has a psychological effect," said Dolvin.

At 7 p. m. (4 a. m., EDT) long lines of infantry who were fighting their way up a nearly perpendicular slope, reached the 35 survivors of the Negro company which had been cut off since morning.

Two Negro soldiers stood on the crest and shouted, "come on up. Come on up."

The call went back down the line. "They're friendly troops. They're still up there."

The linkup followed immediately.

Navy Unveils 'Most Powerful' Plane Engine

PATUXENT, Md., Naval Air Test Center, Sept. 7.—The Navy unveiled here today what is called the world's most powerful gas turbine engine—a Pratt and Whitney jet power plant turning a propeller.

Naval officials hailed the development of the turboprop type engine as filling an important gap in aircraft propulsion. Rear Admiral Alfred M. Pride, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics,, said it will give the military forces and perhaps commercial aviation an airplane in the 400 to 550-plus mph. class with the range of present piston engines.

The new engine demonstrated here is Pratt and Whitney's T-34 Turbo-Wasp. It already has been given a preliminary flight test rating of 5700 horsepower and a Navy spokesman said it is hoped to reach 8000 horsepower within a couple of years.

This T-40's initial rating is about 50 percent higher than the most powerful piston engine now flying—Pratt and Whitney's R-4360, used in the B-36 and other military planes. It, however, weighs only 2550 pounds—about 1500 pounds less than the R-4360—and Perry Pratt, one of its designers, predicted that no bigger or more powerful piston engines than this will be built.

Turboprop engines are counted on by the Navy to propel its long-range patrol bombers and carrier attack planes. Two such planes already are flying—the Convair XP5Y flying boat and the Douglas XA2D carrier-based torpedo-bomber. Both are powered by the Allison T-40—a twin-unit turboprop with an announced preliminary rating of 5500 horsepower.

Although pioneered by Admiral Pride and his Navy air engineers against general indifference, the turboprop type now is being considered by the Air Force for installation in the B-36 and their new tank-carrying Douglas C-124 transport.

Indomitable Robey Back There Fightin'

Pfc. Robert V. Robey, the fighting Washington GI who faced the threat of a court-martial rather than come home from Korea, is back in action.

Reported missing for the second time on July 5—two days after his scheduled discharge date—Robey was returned to duty on July 2, according to the telegram sent his sister, Mrs. Florence Riley, 1732 L st. ne.

Mrs. Riley received a letter from her 21-year-old brother mailed August 15, in which he said he "got two tanks on the 5th of July"—the date he was reported missing—but said nothing about being lost from his unit.

Red Radio Claimed Capture

The Communist radio claimed his capture once before, but a United Press report said he had made his way back to his unit after being cut off for a day or two.

Robey, one of the first Washington men known to be in combat in Korea, made headlines early in July when he refused to come home for a pending discharge despite his sergeant's threat of a court-martial. His decision to stay and fight came as five to seven airplanes subjected his unit to a vicious 25-minute strafing and rocket attack, according to Associated Press reports at the time.

In a letter to his sister, Robey said, "I guess maybe you think I'm crazy staying over here . . . but someone has to stop them and I'm one of the many that are trying."

Robey's brother, Norman E., 19, who enlisted shortly after Robert was reported missing to "see what I could do to help even the score," does not know his brother has been found, according to Mrs. Riley.

Transferred to Fort Knox

He has recently been transferred from Fort Knox, Ky., to Fort Bragg, N. C., and the family hasn't received his new address, his sister said. She said he is due home for a furlough shortly and they will surprise him with the information then.

In the leter of August 15, Robert said he was just out of a hospital in Japan and on his way back to Korea for "the fourth time." He said nothing of any wounds he had received, Mrs. Riley said.

Besides his brother and sister, Robey has several other relatives in the Washington area. His mother, Mrs. Vanlear Robey, resides at 3819 Bladensburg rd., Cottage City, Md., with his four sisters.

Serious U. S. Shortage Of Cotton Is Foreseen

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7 (AP).—The United States faces a serious cotton shortage, the president of the Mississippi Delta Council said today. William M. Garrard, jr., Indianola, Miss., said the shortage would be the first in his recollection.

He predicted the Government's estimate on the present cotton crop would be lower than the one in August. A short crop of 10,208,000 bales was forecast by the Government in August. Prices on cotton have soared to just over 40 cents a pound, highest since 1920.

Allies Stall Red Drive in North

tain, a height two miles northwest of Haman. The mountain has changed hands at least nine times in the past two weeks. It is about 40 miles west of Pusan.

The occupation this time was easy. The Reds apparently withdrew last night after infantry and tanks counterattacked during daylight hours Thursday.

Swinton reported that a Red troop concentration back of the south front, which had been noted earlier in the week, still was building up, possibly presaging a new strike.

The ebbing of the north offensive today was in sharp contrast with Thursday's heavy action.

"Layer Cake" of Opposing Forces

The Reds choked off traffic today between Yongchon and Kyongju, a 20-mile segment. But the Eighth Army spokesman said, "We stopped them" in their drive southwestward from Pohang to Kyongju.

A "layer cake" of opposing forces, one stacked above the other, was attacking and counterattacking in different directions in the Kyongju-Pohang area.

MacBeth said the briefing officer described the tangled battle picture as composed of: One American line, then a North Korean, a South Korean line on a ridge and still a fourth position composed of Americans.

United States Marines and the Army's Second Division compressed tighter the Communist bridgehead east of the Naktong in the center of the line some 23 miles southwest of Taegu. Marines engaged the enemy hand-to-hand. They used bayonets and slugged with rifle butts.

Allied warplanes struck anew at the massed Korean Red armor.

Pilots reported that of 84 fresh tanks the Reds had thrown in, they damaged or destroyed 65 in two days—48 on Thursday alone.

The American First Cavalry smashed headon but indecisively in fighting with Reds on ridges in sight of Taegu from the north.

Associated Press Correspondent Jack MacBeth told how one regiment fought toe-to-toe against assaulting Reds and once had to turns its artillery around to beat off the infiltrating enemy.

This fighting took place along the Kumhwa "bowling alley" road to Taegu, scene of a great Red repulse in August. Other cavalrymen 4 miles northeast of Red-held Waegwan, beat off two Red attacks. Waegwan is 12 miles northwest of Taegu.

MacBeth said prisoners told interrogators they were members of the First North Korean Division. This lent support to the belief that the Red's Thirteenth Division had received reinforcements in the shape of the First in their desperate drive to break through the cavalry's right flank.

A Tokyo intelligence officer said two Red columns—each several miles long—were moving down the east coast despite slashing aerial attacks and naval bombardments.

Buildup in Kasan Area

The spokesman placed the motor convoys, which could be carrying both men and materials, 9 and 40 miles north of Pohang.

The Eighth Army's Thursday communique also noted a buildup of enemy strength south and west of the walled city of Kasan. This mountain stronghold is about 15 miles northwest of Taegu.

Along the Naktong river line in the west, the Marine Second Division task force scored fresh gains in its effort to wipe out the Red bulge. The Americans have consolidated positions on dominating heights of this bloody battlefield where up to four Red divisions had stabbed deep into United States lines.

This task force has taken a toll of 7300 enemy dead and wounded.

Surprise Landing by Allies

In Tokyo, a South Korean spokesman said Republican naval units made a surprise landing Wednesday on an island off Kusan on the west coast of Korea and on another island off Mokpo in the southwest. He described the landings as being the start of "very important naval operations."

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle, back in Tokyo from the front, wrote frankly that United Nations forces were still playing the role of firemen.

He said the enemy appeared to be getting stronger and that there was no sign the U. N. had enough muscle yet to end the war in a single mighty knockout blow.

REGAIN TERRITORY— Allied troops (open arrows) blunted North Korean attacks yesterday on various sectors of the front and regained territory in the west in the Hyonpung-Yongsan area and in the Haman sector. Two Red drives were aimed at Taegu. The situation around Yongchon was critical and fighting was confused. Red reinforcements were reported moving into the Pohang area

Northeast Citizens Urge Setup to Aid Servicemen

The Northeast Council of Citizens' Associations last night asked the District Commissioners to set up a central agency to provide recreation and food and lodging for visiting servicemen and women.

Meeting at the Twelfth Precinct Station, the delegates also indorsed the Federation of Citizens' Associations proposal to establish a Citizens' Advisory Council to advise the Commissioners on budget and other matters.

The delegates were advised to bring up discussions of civilian defense in the District before their respective citizens' associations.

ACHESON—From Pge. 1

Acheson Proposes Korean Aid

United Nations has the chance to make the prototype of the kind of world which it wants to make universally."

Taking a fling at Soviet Delegate Jacob A. Malik, the Secretary said "Mr. Malik's performances during the month of August have brought out, as no speeches of anybody else could bring out, the nature of the obstruction which has been going on, almost ever since the U. N. started, to thwart the purposes of the Charter."

"Complete Support" Needed

He said the United Nations "must have the complete and unwavering support of everyone else, so that by sheer moral pressure we will shame people who do what has been done in the month of August in the Security Council." And he predicted that the coming General Assembly would probably be the most important U. N. meeting ever held.

Earlier, President Truman told the same group that the United States is fighting in Korea "for a peaceful world, not for conquest."

"The Government of the United States is trying by every means at its command to support the United Nations with all it has—men, arms and efforts for peace," he said.

Although the Secretary talked of postwar relief and reconciliation, officials here are not at all anxious to have the United Nations take up postwar Korean problems now.

It is too early, in the official American view, for the Assembly to consider what should be done when the United Nations forces reach the thirty-eighth parallel. One official said yesterday that the time for such a discussion would come when the United Nations forces were much nearer their goal than now.

Prompt Action Favored

As for Formosa, the other point of major crisis in the Far East, officials here hope the Assembly will consider the problem promptly. For the United States wants the support of at least two-thirds of the Assembly for the twin policies of (1) neutralizing Formosa and (2) settling its future peacefully.

State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said yesterday that Communist China was "bound" to await a peaceful settlement, since it had brought the Formosa issue before the U. N. Security Council. He hoped there would be no attack on the island, although he said the Department had "no intimation of what the Chinese Communists intend to do."

Members of the American delegation to the U. N. were in Washington yesterday being "briefed" on Formosa and other Assembly problems. The United States would like the Assembly to send a commission to Formosa for a thorough study of the problem.

The commission would take testimony from all interested groups, including Communist and Nationalist Chinese and from Formosan leaders, and would then recommend a future status for the island.

2 Guard Units, Going on Duty Monday, Reviewed at Armory

The 260th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, District National Guard units slated to go on active duty Monday, were reviewed last night by Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, District Guard commander.

Following the parade at the District Armory, General Abendroth wished the officers and men Godspeed on their tour of active duty, which begins with an 8 a. m. muster formation at the Armory on Monday. Also going on duty Monday will be the 171st M. P. Battalion.

Parading with the called-up units were the 340th AAA Automatic Weapons Battalion and the 380th AAA Automatic Weapons Battalion.

General Abendroth also presented awards for length of service to 17 members of the units being activated. Recognized for 25 years of service was Col. LeRoy S. Mann of 5447 30th pl. nw., who commands the 260th AAA Group.

Others receiving awards included Lieut. Col. Carl Santilli, 419 N. Kenmore st., Arlington, for 20 years; Majors William J. Van Schelven, 4613 Harvard rd., College Park, Md., and Raymond O. Truck Hits Underpass, Drops Cargo—A Truck

BALTIMORE, Sept. 7 (AP).—A tractor-trailer automobile carrier drove under a railroad overpass today and left part of its cargo—a truck—behind.

The new stake-bodied truck became hooked on the under structure of the overpass and dangled there.

Soviet Bomb Protest Fails

uate military areas with North Korean "use of hospitals, churches, schools and innocent-appearing dwellings for concealment of war equipment."

Then he added: "But this (North Korean) crime shrinks into insignificance when compared with that most abhorent of all war crimes—the shooting in cold blood of unarmed and bound prisoners without any reason other than that they are prisoners."

The vote killing the Soviet resolution came midway in an afternoon continuation of an unusual council session carried over from the morning.

The morning meeting was consumed entirely by a speech by Soviet Delegate Jacob A. Malik, who reeled off a long list of alleged "barbarous bombings" and 'barbarous atacks" by American planes and other forces on "non-military objectives."

Malik accused the United States of following Hitler's policy of total destruction; of dropping hundreds of tons of bombs on undefended Korean towns; of "bloody terror" and "mass execution" of civilians that wiped out all life in certain areas.

Gross received strong support from British Delegate Sir Gladwyn Jebb, Council president, who again referred to Joseph Stalin's 1939 charge that Britain and France—not Germany—started World War II.

Gross read excerpts from U. N. broadcasts and leaflets dropped by the millions, he said, in an effort to spare civilians in attacks on military objectives.

One leaflet said: "U. N. forces urge civilians to leave all cities with military targets—We wish to avoid bombing civilians."

"I ask the Council," said Gross, "to contrast this type of warning and solicitude and care for the civilian population with the practice of the Red Korean army of using civilians as a human screen for ground forces."

Referring to accounts of American prisoners shot with their hands tied behind their backs, Gross said:

"This most vile of crimes has been committed by the North Korean regime and we have indisputable proof of such

Truman Plans Talk Saturday

President Truman will speak to the Nation Saturday night, he announced yesterday, on the home-front economic mobilization—the "hard work and sacrifice"—that is the necessary counterpart to the expanded defense program.

His speech, at 10:30 p. m. (EDT), will be broadcast over the four major radio networks, and will also be televised.

Meantime, however, at his weekly news conference, the President left reporters in some state of confusion over his plans for administering the new economic controls act.

Fort the most part, he declined to comment in detail on how he will exercise the new authority granted by Congress.

He did indicate, however, that he had not planned to make W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Defense Resources Board, the over-all economic mobilization director. A story to that effect in a morning newspaper was the first he had heard of the idea, he said.

Yet on Capitol Hill, testifying before a closed session of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Symington was reported to have indicated to Senators that he was slated to have an important role in the controls program.

Similarly, Symington indicated that the Administration planned, as was reported yesterday in The Washington Post, to create a new agency to handle wage and price stabilization, when that should be necessary. Initially, it was to prepare an organization and make the necessary preliminary studies.

But Mr. Truman told his news conference that the creation of an overall price-wage agency was not now under consideration.

Conceivably, the statements are reconcilable on the theory that Mr. Truman misunderstood the question put to him, and was indicating that no super agency, to handle all the new authority in the bill, was being planned.

Much of the authority will be parcelled out—allocations principally to the Department of Commerce, credit controls to the Federal Reserve Board, and several additional matters to other agencies.

Mr. Truman said the bill was now being carefully analyzed in various Federal engencies and that he would explain his plans Saturday night. Presumably he will sign the bill before then.

Economic Readiness Stressed

PARIS, Sept. 7 (AP).—Camille Gutt, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, urged today that economic weapons be readied against inflation which might result from rearmament or war.

Gutt, a Belgian, told the Board of Governors of the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development that "peace, which until a few months ago many of us thought to be within our grasp, has suddenly receded."

And in the event of another world war, he declared, "We must avoid, after having overcome the aggressor, by force of arms, having him take his revenge through economic anarchy."

"Short-sighted and inadequately coordinated financial policies" intensified the inflation after the last war, Gutt said.

Peace Nations Challenged

"The peace loving nations have been challenged," he asserted. "They have to meet the challenge and to win, both on the military and economic battlefields. They can and they must win."

He called for firm action on the international level and said:

"It will help to prevent an economic disruption which may have far-reaching consequences if countries that are economically strong admit that mutual aid should start not when war has already begun, but at a time when an effort is being made to defend peace."

Gutt's address supplemented the lengthy annual report of the Fund to the fifth annual meeting of the Boards of Governors of the two international financing institutions.

Dangerous Inflation Seen

The 160-page report warned Western Europe that it faces dangerous inflation unless reconstruction spending is curtailed. Further, the international money experts cautioned that continued wage boosts would raise export prices to a point where vital American markets will be lost.

At a conference after a policy committee meeting, Gutt said one of the most important points discussed was the interrelation of prices and availability of raw materials needed for rearmament. No conclusions were reached, he said.

At the outset of the meeting, the Board of Governors rejected a Czech demand that Nationalist China be ousted from the two fund organizations.

The vote on the Czech petition was taken by show of hands. Yugoslavia supported the Czechs.

Vets Warned of Police State

CLEVELAND, Sept. 7 (AP).—Avoid hysteria in meeting the threat of communism, the national commander of the AMVETS urged today.

"Hog-tie the Communists by every legal means . . . but avoid the hysteria which will give the extreme right-wingers an opportunity to inflict a police state upon us," Harold Russell said in his keynote address to the AMVETS' sixth national convention.

The 4500 persons here for the three-day convention also heard Maj. Gen. Carl Gray, national director of the Veterans' Administration, say that the Nation's lengthening pension rolls testify to the ultimate cost of inadequate defenses.

Russell asked veterans to forego any further demands for new pensions, bonuses and other benefits, pending an end to the Korean war.

He condemned "efforts to exploit the present struggle for freedom with a policy of business-as-usual and profits-as-usual."

The 4500 persons here for the convention represent more than 157,000 members of the AMVETS, whose full title is American Veterans of World War II.

Advertising Is Mobilized To Aid Nation

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (Spl.)—In the present crisis America has a weapon for war that it did not have before Pearl Harbor, Samuel C. Gale, chairman of the Advertising Council, said today as he released the eighth annual report of that nonprofit organization.

"This report for our fiscal year of 1949-50 was written 'before Korea' so it covers only our operations during a period of relative peace. It is important, we think, that business and advertising keep in mind this mechanism of persuasion already mobilized to serve the Nation in any emergency . . . be it semiwar or superwar. Actually we have already converted some of our peacetime campaigns to cope with the Korean crisis and undoubtedly we will have to revise others, curtail some, and give top priority to new ones to help fight communism or any other force that may threaten our democratic way of life."

The Advertising Council, backed by American business and all factors of the advertising industry, was mobilized early in World War II. From 1942 to 1945 it handled more than 150 war information campaigns, then after the war continued to conduct campaigns for the national welfare.

The council reported its biggest "peacetime" year in history. The campaigns got good results, and some of them are measurable, it said. For example, the mileage death rate of accidents on the Nation's highways dropped again. In the five years that the Council has conducted its Stop Accidents campaign, the death rate has been cut almost in half, despite the vast increase in cars and traffic. Sales of (E, F, and G) U. S. Savings Bonds topped redemptions by $1,500,000,000, thus helping to curb inflationary trends.

"Practically every State in the Union got better schools and better teachers because citizens acted," the council said. "Church attendance picked up noticebly as a result of the Religion in American Life campaign. And for the fifth year the rate of man-made fires dropped again in the National Forest areas, saving approximately one million acres of timber land, one of our Nation's most vital resurces."

During the past year, the volume of public service advertising ran higher than ever. National advertisers continued to support the public service campaigns, through magazines and radio-television, and local advertisers stepped up their support through their home town newspapers. The Nation's leading advertising agencies gave the council full support, and during impressions; and the transpor- contributed their services to the preparation of materials for the campaigns, the Council said.

All the advertising media played a big part in the council's eighth year. Newspapers and Sunday supplements stepped up their support more than 20 percent; magazines continued to back the Savings Bond campaign every month; radio networks and hundreds of individual stations broadcast public service messages to tens of millions of Americans each week; the outdoor advertising industry contributed thousands of panels to 10 campaigns, accounted for more than six billion advertising impresions; and the transportation advertising industry contributed more than a million car cards, beamed its messages at people riding in streetcars, subways, trains and buses. Both the outdoor and transportation advertising companies also combined to accelerate their public service through "three sheets," the posters usually seen in shopping areas and in subway and railway stations.

Drastic Penalties Asked by Peron for Fifth Columnists

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—President Juan D. Peron asked Congress last night to approve drastic punishment for fifth columnists—saboteurs, spies, traitors and even rumor-mongers.

He asked for quick action on a bill providing punishment ranging from one month in jail to the death penalty for subversive activity. The Peronist Party has an absolute majority in both houses of Congress, and passage of the bill was considered certain.

The most sweeping passage of the measure provides that any person who "provokes public alarm or lowers public morale" may be sent to prison for one to eight years.

Other penalties include 8 to 25 years in prison for any person caught delivering secret defense information to a foreign power and one to 25 years for sabotage. In time of war, saboteurs or spies could be put to death.

Grunewald Testifies Before Wire-Tap Jury

loney, former Justice Department attorney.

"Grunewald has nothing to say, at this time," Maloney said.

"Was he a missing witness during the past three months?" asked a reporter.

"That is the figment of someone's imagination,' Maloney said. "They just didn't contact the right people."

"Where has Grunewald been? Was he subpenaed by the FBI at The Plains, Va.? Did he know the Senate subcommittee counsel was looking for him all last night? Was he in Harry Woodring's suite in the Washington Hotel?"

"No comment," said Maloney.

"Well, did Grunewald have anything to do with wire tapping?" was the next question.

To this, the lawyer and client began shouting at once.

"Absolutely not. We deny it flatly. We never did anything of the kind. It is ridiculous. Absolutely, definitely untrue?"

"The Good Life"

As they left for the grand jury hearing, Maloney said: "Grunewald looks so young because he has led such a good life."

Grunewald then said, "Give me a print to send to my girlfriend."

Inside the grand jury room, prosecutors plied Grunewald with countless questions. Reporters could see in through the glass panel.

Maloney said that Grunewald would answer all questions.

"He will not claim self-incrimination for the logical reason that he knows nothing which can incriminate him.'

When he came out, Grunewald admitted that he was hoarse after the session, and said it was "because I had fish for lunch."

Meanwhile, Martin Fay, the subcommittee counsel, slapped subpenas on both Grunewald and Maloney. Grunewald must bring records showing his associates and business since 1946 for a closed hearing at 10:30 today on the Hill.

"I won't stand for any executive sessions,' said Maloney. "I will demand an open hearing. My man is entitled to it."

Maloney himself is no stranger to wire tapping. In 1940, he was council for a Senate Commerce subcommittee investigating that same subject.

For several weeks, both the FBI and Martin Fay, Senate subcommittee counsel, were vieing to see who would be the first to slap a subpena on Grunewald. The FBI got their man first.

Fay Trailed

Fay started out a few hours later but he missed his quarry.

All night, he was searching for Grunewald around the Virginia town and then returned to Washington, where he searched for him at The Westchester, with no result.

From there, Fay went to the suite of former War Secretary Harry Woodring at the Washington Hotel.

At 4:30, Fay knocked on the door. A baldish man answered.

"Are you Grunewald?" Fay asked.

"Is that what you woke me for?" replied the baldish man as he firmly closed the door.

Nearby were the remains of two steak dinners.

Fay went downstairs and asked the desk clerk who had ordered the food. He learned it was someone named W. P. Maloney.

William Power Maloney, according to newspaper reports, had been hired by Grunewald. Also, he once represented Shimon in a domestic relations case.

Fay then knew he had found his quarry. Maloney was the baldish man.

HENRY GRUNEWALD, LEFT, WITH ATTORNEY MALONEY

Crime Inquiry Will Get Data Of Chicagoans

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—An attorney for three of Chicago's biggest underworld figures said today that they will go to Washington and personally hand the Senate crime investigating committee the records of their activities.

The three had refused to accept service of subpenas issued here for their surrender of records, and their new move was an acknowledged slap at local operatives attempting to carry out the work of the committee.

The three involved are Louis (Little New York) Campagna, Paul (The Waiter) Ricca, and Charles (Cherry Nose) Gioe, all Federal parolees from a conviction of extorting one million dollars from the motion picture industry.

They have been named in a wholesale issuance of subpenas here by George Robinson, representing the committee, who has been working with the aid of the Chicago Crime Commission to investigate organized crime here.

The subpenas were directed at rounding up records of hoodlums and others as a preliminary to their personal appearance at hearings.

Attorney William Scott Stewart, representing the parolees, had refused to let them accept the subpenas, declaring they were improperly drawn. Among other things, the orders asked those named to bring their records to the crime commission's offices.

Stewart said today that the three would go to Washington and personally hand their records to Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) who heads the Senate committee

U. S. to Widen Cotton Export Control Today

The Government yesterday moved to clamp export controls over shipment of raw cotton and cotton linters to all destinations except Canada.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer announced he is imposing license controls, effective today, at the request of Secretary of Agriculture Brannan.

"I am taking this action in order to permit the Government to determine the magnitude of American defense requirements for cotton," Sawyer said in a statement.

A cotton shortage is now feared by Government officials, although the Agriculture Department earlier had ordered farmers to cut 1950 production because it was expected cotton would be in surplus. The Korean fighting outbreak has changed that situation.

Sawyer said licenses will be required for all exports of cotton and cotton linters after 11 a. m. today except for raw cotton shipments valued under $250 and destined for countries outside the Soviet bloc.

There was a similar exception for shipments of cotton linters valued at less than $100 and destined for non-Soviet controlled areas.

Furthermore, the department said no licenses will be required for shipments "on dock, on lighter, laden aboard an exporting carrier or in transit to a port of exit pursuant to actual orders for exports prior to September 8."

Bridges Says Reds Infiltrated Farm Union

By The Associated Press

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) charged yesterday that Communists had infiltrated The Farmers Union with "considerable if not complete success."

In a Senate speech, he also said that the farm plan advanced by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan could be called "the Stalin plan."

Bridges said his evidence about Communist penetration into the Farmers Union, one of the Nation's major farm organizations, was an added reason why the Senate should approve the sweeping anti-subversive bill now before it.

Bridges outlined these five phases of what he called the "involved and complex plot" of Communists to take over the Farmers Union:

"1. That the Communist Party claims it planned to infiltrate and take over the Farmers Union during the late 1930's.

"2. That this effort went forward under the direction of the late Hal Ware, son of the Communist 'saint,' Mother Bloor. A part of Ware's program was the organization within the Department of Agriculture of the Communist cell to which, Whittaker Chambers has testified, Lee Pressman, Nathan Witt, John Abt, Alger Hiss, Charles Kramer and Victor Perlo belonged.

"3. That the Communists have boasted repeatedly that they were successful in their effort to control by infiltration the Farmers Union.

"4. That persons who are Communists, Communist sympathizers, or Communist coddlers occupy positions of great influence in the national and some State headquarters of the Farmers Union.

"5. That the Farmers Union so consistently espouses Communist causes, parrots Communist propaganda and refuses to denounce Communists or their activities as to preclude the possibility of accident or coincidence."

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) told Bridges that the farmers union in Minnesota was a "clean" organization.

He said the rank and file of the organization in Minnesota had cleaned out everyone from responsible jobs "who ever had a taint of communism."

Senator Langer (R., N. D.) told the Senate:

"As soon as I can get the floor I'm going to prove that statement after statement the Senator has made is not true."

Langer said he knows nothing of farmers' unions in other sections of the United States, but that in North Dakota they are made up of "patriotic loyal American citizens."

At Denver, James G. Patton, president of the farm organization, said Bridges was attacking the Truman Administration "by trying to smear the farmers union."

"I don't know of a single person who has responsibility in our national or State organizations who is a member of the Communist Party." Patton said. "And on any number of occasions I have denounced communism."

Langer Inserts Book, 159 Pages, in 'Record'

By The Associated Press

Anyone who settles down to read a speech by Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.), which will appear in today's "Congressional Record" had better be prepared for a long siege.

For Langer, in defending the Farmers Union, not only talked for three hours. But he also inserted in the "record" numerous pamphlets and newspaper articles, and—

The entire book, "Grass Roots," by Harold V. Knight.

"It runs 159 pages," Langer told reporters later. "When they ask for a fight from me, brother they get it."

Labor Political Heads to Talk With Truman

By The Associated Press

President Truman will join labor's political leaders in a huddle at the Statler Hotel here tonight.

The President is meeting at that time with about 50 people drawn from the CIO's Political Action Committee and the AFL'S Labor League for Political Education, the White House announced yesterday.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross said it will be "a private dinner," and that it will "not be open to newspaper coverage."

He described it as a round table meeting under which the political arms of the two big labor organizations will cooperate.

The groups were formed to further the election of congressional and other candidates in sympathy with union views.

Ross said there would be no set speeches at the dinner but that Mr. Truman will participate in the discussions.

Then, he added: "The roll of labor in the present emergency will be discussed."

Mr. Truman is going over about 7 p. m. with the expectation of staying about two and a half hours.

When reporters asked Ross why the meeting was closed, he said the White House didn't control the meeting, that the President was to be a guest. He said the labor groups controlled the meeting.

Masonic Temple Damaged by Fire

ATLANTA, Sept. 7 (U.P.)—Flames fanned by wind swept today through the Masonic Temple and caused a probable loss of more than $500,000. One fireman was injured.

The fire broke out shortly after 1 p. m. EST only a block from the scene of the Winecoff Hotel holocaust in which 119 died on December 7, 1946.

Dewey, Lynch Nominated

contention in favor of Dewey under heavy "draft-Dewey" pressure. Until then, Hanley's bid for the top spot in Albany had been unchallenged.

The exchange of nominations by Dewey and Hanley apparently was intended to demonstrate solidarity between them and within the party. In addition to Hanley, two other members of Dewey's "Albany team" won nomination on the State ticket by acclamation.

On the Democratic side, Lehman, too, was nominated by acclamation after the convention took a roll call to pick Lynch as the man to try to end Dewey's eight years of Republican rule in Albany.

N. Y. City Support

Delegates "went along" with Lynch chiefly because he was the choice of National Committeeman and Bronx Boss Edward J. Flynn and of New York City's four other powerful county leaders who controlled more than enough votes to put him across.

Two candidates were placed in nomination against Lynch—Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, a fellow resident of the Bronx, and former State Supreme Court Justice Walter Bliss, an up-Stater.

Lynch defeated Ewing, the choice of Albany County leader Daniel P. O'Connell, 762 to 67. Bliss received eight votes.

On motion of Ewing and Bliss backers, the nomination of Lynch was made unanimous.

O'Connell, apparently reflecting the sentiments of many delegates, opposed Lynch's nomination on the ground that a stronger and better known Democrat was needed against Dewey.

Lynch, in his acceptance speech, pledged continued support of Truman's domestic Fair Deal and the President's efforts in the Korean crisis.

The Republicans, in their platform, said they would "speak out strongly" against what they called the "bungling, indecision and lack of foresight" in the Truman Administration.

Suspect Arrested In Impersonation Of FBI Agent

ROANOKE, Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—A 35-year-old West Virginian is held by Federal authorities on a charge of impersonating an FBI agent.

Charles K. Wheatly was brought here today on a removal order from Cincinnati, Ohio, to face trial in the Harrisonburg division of United States District Court.

Howard C. Gilmer, jr., United States district attorney, said Wheatly is accused of having registered at a hotel at Luray, representing himself to be one C. D. Womack, agent in charge of the FBI office in New York. Wheatly allegedly made false reservations for FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover and party for the weekend of August 14, then left the hotel without paying his bill.

1950 Alexandria Utilities Taxes To Net $501,299

Taxes on public utilities will net Alexandria $501,299 this year, an increase of nearly $200,000 over last year, City Manager W. Guy Ancell said yesterday.

The estimated total is based on assessments set up by the State Corporation Commission for 1950, Ancell said, and will include taxes on both real estate and personal property owned by utilities. Principal reason for the increase is the new power plant of the Potomac Electric Power Co., which will yield about $200,000 in comparison to the $56,678 paid last year when the plant was only partially completed.

Among other major contributors will be the Virginia Electric and Power Co., which will be assessed $84,916; the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., $64,009, and the Potomac Yard, $56,671.

Both Sides Firm in GE Tieup

By The Associated Press

The Government, pushing for quick settlement of the General Electric strike in the interest of national defense, yesterday found both parties unyielding in day-long negotiations.

Mediation director Cyrus Ching, who led a mediation team into the talks, told the negotiators "anything that produces a shortage of goods at this time is a hazard."

But James B. Carey, chairman of the CIO International Electrical Workers Union, stood pat on his wage and pension demands—or, as an alternative, his idea of handing the dispute over to a presidential fact-finding board.

No progress was reported when the negotiations were recessed at 7:30 p. m. (EDT), to be resumed at 10 a. m. today.

GE spokesmen resisted the fact-finding proposal. Vice President Lemuel Boulware told the session that GE has "given and continued to give all summer." Now, he said, the company is through giving.

Ching also was cool to fact-finding at this stage, although Carey has offered to return 32,000 strikers to their jobs if a board is set up to investigate the dispute.

The walkout now affects only a minority of GE's workers and about half of CIO-IUE's claimed representation in the company.

IUE is seeking contract terms estimated to represent a 15-cent hourly wage increase, while the company has offered benefits equivalent to a 10-cent hike. The major stumbling-block, informants indicated, is a union demand that the company assume the 2 percent of salary now contributed by employes to GE's pension fund. However, the union's demands also include restoration of cost-of-living wage increases, a profit-sharing program such as was abandoned three years ago, liberalized vacations, and two more paid holidays a year. Six holidays now are granted.

Truman Eats Words And Wins Ovation

Secretary of State Acheson "be requested by the President to submit his resignation and that the President seek out and appoint a nationally known, loyal and outstanding statesman" to succeed him.

The committee asserted that "under a false claim of economy, the defenses of the United States have fallen to the point where we cannot support our foreign policy or protect our interests—even against the fourth-rate Communist satellite state of North Korea."

This was blamed on the "blundering of the Defense Department," and the resolution condemned the "short-sighted, inefficent and dictatorial policies" of Secretary Johnson.

Secretary Acheson was charged by the committee with refusing "to sever his connections with such convicted perjurers and Communist sympathizers as Alger Hiss."

The resolution, expected to be passed by the convention this morning, said the State Department has been "infiltrated by Communist agents, fellow travelers and people of doubtful loyalty . . ." The President was also urged to take "immediate and drastic action to oust every known Communist sympathizer, leftist and fellow traveler from the State Department" or any other Government agency where they may be found.

The President's unexpected action in personally "eating crow" before the convening Marine veterans stemmed from his recent statement that the Marines are the "Navy's police force" and have a "propaganda machine that is almost equal to Stalin's."

Wednesday, in a public letter, the President said he sincerely regretted his "unfortunate choice of language."

Following through in person yesterday, he told the former Marines' convention he hoped that "from now on there will never be any misunderstanding between us."

League Commandant Nixon, who had thought the written apology of Wednesday marked the end of the President's remarks on the Marine Corps, was at a convention staff meeting when, at 9:20 a. m., two secret service men appeared to inform him the President was on his way to the Statler Hotel.

The flustered commandant, a Seattle attorney, redoubled his previous efforts to get the convention hall filled. He had already sent out a call for good attendance because he knew Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Marine Corps commandant, was coming.

Nixon hastened to the convention room and said from the platform to the 200 delegates, about half of them women members of the league and the league auxiliary:

"The discussion of yesterday is at an end. We are not honoring a man who made an intemperate remark. We are honoring our Commander-in-Chief."

This was the first indication to the Leatherneck veterans that the President was to appear. Nixon sternly warned that "no wise-cracking or smiles will be tolerated." He pointed out that, with the country at war, there was no place for levity.

At 9:50 a. m., after a bugle call by Herbert Baldwin, 70-year-old official convention bugler, the President entered by a side door, led by Nixon. For 10 seconds there was silence, and then the previously belligerent Marines, on their feet, broke into loud applause for 35 seconds.

General Cates, who accompanied the President to the convention platform, said:

"We are greatly honored to have the President with us today. We admire courage, especially personal courage."

Grinning and waving his arms, President Truman, who said he was happy to be with the group, quipped:

"You succeeded in enticing me over here." As the laughter and applause subsided and his reception made it increasingly clear the Marines were willing to forgive and forget, Mr. Truman warmed up to his impromptu speech.

"There are incidents, sometimes, that appear to be almost the end of the world when they happen, that usually turn out for the good of the cause," he said.

He declared he was most interested in a unified approach to the crisis we face, and said his whole endeavor for five years has been to attain "a peaceful settlement of the greatest war in history."

Then he said the outbreak of the Korean war confronted this country with a situation "in which we either had to stand up and say we supported the United Nations in its effort to attain peace in the world, or we had to back out and surrender." He said this course "is not my way of doing business."

Regarding attacks on his Cabinet officers, he said it has become "almost impossible" for him to persuade capable men to "come here and stand for a barrage of that kind."

The whole campaign of criticism can be traced to "a certain political event which will take place in November," Mr. Truman said, labeling the attacks "not only unfair, but unjust."

Candidates for national offices were nominated yesterday afternoon. They include Maurice J. Fagan of Philadelphia and Mason D. Wade of St. Petersburg, Fla., for commandant and Melvin Maas of Silver Spring, Md., former Minnesota Representative, and John R. O'Brien, Passaic, N. J., present national service officer, for senior vice commandant.

Mr. Truman thanked the Marines warmly for their cordial reception.

Nixon then presented Distinguished guest medals to the President and General Gates. Mr. Truman grinned and the Leathernecks applauded laughingly when the League commandant said he would also give the President a history of the Marine Corps' 175 years.

Then Miss Ethel M. Scheirer, 25, of Shiremanstown, Pa., secretary to the adjutant of the League Department of Pennsylvania, led two choruses of the Marine Hymn from the platform. The President stood at attention but did not join in the singing.

"He Sure Did It Clever"

He was again roundly cheered as he left the convention at 10 a. m. One lady Marine, who seemed to size up the general feeling of the group, said:

"Well, he came to us. We didn't go to him. Did you see his smile? He sure did it clever."

After the convention got back to its business, Nixon told a reporter he had had an informal chat with the President in which Mr. Truman said he would "try my best" to attend the League's convention banquet, scheduled for 7:30 tonight.

League members, who reviewed a ceremonial sunset parade at the Marine Barracks at 8th and I sts. se. last evening, will resume their business session at 9 a. m. today. Tonight's banquet and dance will conclude the convention.

Marines Fail to Hail Chief As Dental Plate Slips

President Truman failed to receive his usual musical salute, "Hail to the Chief" yesterday at the Marine Corps League convention. The reason was not a slip of mind, but rather a slip of the teeth.

Herbert Baldwin, 70-year-old Marine veteran of New York and official convention bugler, planned to play it, but at the crucial moment his upper plate slipped out of place.

So he played the Marine call to attention, which has only four short notes. "It was all I could handle under the circumstances," he said.

Concessions Seen Likely for Germans

LONDON, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—The Big Three foreign ministers are expected to agree in New York to grant new concessions to Western Germany, strengthening her as a bulwark against Russian imperialism.

The Korean war has forced a choice between two evils, and the West regards eventual German rearmament as a lesser evil than the threat of Soviet-backed Communism.

The Big Three meet in New York next week. British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin sailed today aboard the Queen Mary. French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman flies from Paris Sunday.

Schuman's Press conference statement before his departure plus Premiere Rene Pleven's recent speech made it plain that France—always the most jittery about Germany—is ready to go a long way toward strengthening Germany.

Steps that are certain to be taken to build a place in western defenses for Germany are:

1. More Allied military forces in western Europe and Germany. United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy and United States Ambassador to London Lewis Douglas both favor such a move.
2. A temporary increase in Germany's allowable steel production.
3. Agreement to let West German Republic increase substantially its internal police force.

The steps toward greater sovereignty for Germany that the Big Three Foreign Ministers will probably approve include:

1. Creation of a German Foreign Office.
2. A formula—very complicated—for ending the state of war with Germany—amounting to a separate peace.
3. Negotiation of limited treaties which—except for continued occupation of Germany by the Allies—would give it almost complete sovereignty.

Commission Favors Greater Steel Output

BONN, Germany, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Allied High Commission has recommended an increase of West Germany's steel output to the American, French and British Foreign Ministers, a competent Allied source said today.

He said the commission agreed unanimously on raising the present ceiling of 11,100,000 tons annually, though opinions still differ as to the new limit. The limit, the source added, will depend on the outcome of the three-power talks starting in New York September 12.

Rock Creek 'Hams' Hold Emergency Drill

The Rock Creek Amateur Radio Association held an emergency drill last night with 20 members operating 15 "ham" stations from southeast Washington to Rockville.

The drill was a "complete success," accordi[illegible] to B. A. Tankersley, 47 Wheati[illegible] st., Kensington, Md., and proved that it was "possible to maintain communications during a disaster regardless of conditions." Tankersley is the emergency coordinator of the club.

Request to Papers

Expose Asked Of German Red Backers

MUNICH, Germany, Sept. 7, (AP).—Dr. George N. Shuster, U. S. commissioner for Bavaria, called on West German newspapers today to publish the names of Germans who secretly support Communism.

Dr. Shuster said he has received reliable information that certan Bavarians have helped support Communist newspapers by purchasing advertisements.

Fifteen of West Germany's Communist newspapers have been closed for three months by the Allied high commission for urging resistance to the occupation forces. The 16th—and last—has been temporarily closed by the refusal of a non-Communist printer to print the paper.

Other non-Communist Bavarians are contributng directly to the party, the American official said.

"Those who hope in this way to win a guarantee from Ulbricht (the Communist boss of Eastern Germany) are not only fools but also saboteurs of the defense against the Communist menace," Dr. Shuster told a news conference.

Seaboard Railroad Boosts Dividend

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (AP).—Seaboard Air Line Railroad today declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on its common stock, payable September 28 to holders of record September 18.

In each of the preceding two quarters this year, a dividend of 50 cents a share was paid.

Berlin Mayor Urges Strong Forces Now

BERLIN, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Berlin's anti-Russian Lord Mayor urged the West today to send strong forces to Germany immediately as a "first step toward effective defense of western Europe."

Ernst Reuter said in an interview that Germany cannot be defended now in the case of an attack from the east.

"The military vacuum in Europe is too much of a temptation to the Russians, he said.

Reuter smilingly said that, despite international tension, Berlin is "perhaps the calmest city in Europe—maybe because we are so accustomed to living dangerously."

The stocky, 60-year-old Socialist who escaped the Nazis before the war to become a professor in Turkey said that "so long as the Russians are in eastern Germany there is always danger. Surprises are possible any day, though I think they are unlikely now that Korea is preoccupation No. 1."

Adenauer Tells Germans West Will Stand by Them

BONN, Germany, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer today assured Germans the West had been "alerted" to the dangers of Communist expansion and would stand by Germany if trouble threatened.

"If we can keep our faith and our confidence, then I am sure we will find a peaceful solution to threatening problems short of a shooting war." Adenauer said in a speech marking the first anniversary of the western state's Parliament.

The Chancellor praised West Berliners for withstanding Communist pressure and he said Western unity with the 18 million Soviet-zone Germans was his government's "constant goal."

Kin of Genghis Khan To Resettle in Paraguay

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 7 (AP).—The hordes of Genghis Khan are about to sweep over Paraguay—but this time the invasion is a peaceful one.

The International Refugee Organization (IRO) disclosed today that 700 Kalmucks—descendants of the legendary war lords—are going to settle in Paraguay.

Oppressed by their Soviet masters and then gathered up by Adolph Hitler for slave labor in Germany during the war, the Kalmucks gravitated to each other in the IRO camps. They wanted to be together, and now the Paraguay government has respected their wish. They will be settled on 9000 acres of fertile valley soil southeast of Asuncion.

Rome Gas Cut Off

ROME, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—The entire city of Rome was without gas tonight as workers went on strike to protest the arrest of 16 fellow employes for demonstrating for higher wages earlier today.

Roman Catholic

Monasteries Closed by Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 7 (AP).—Suspension of all Roman Catholic religious orders except those operating State-approved church schools was ordered today by the Hungarian government.

The decree affected about 11,000 monks and nuns, who were ordered to leave their monasteries within three months.

Whether the Communist government's new regulation was a unilateral step or the result of negotiations between state officials and church leaders was not immediately established.

In an agreement concluded August 30 between church and state, the government pledged to return to the Catholics eight former church schools. Monks and nuns will teach in them.

The August 30 concordat followed a dispute of long standing between the Catholic church and the government.

Negotiations between the government and Bench of Bishops, highest Catholic church authority in Hungary, began June 22, when a government announcement said the bishops requested the talks.

The text of the agreement indicated important concessions both by the government and the church.

British Unions Junk Labor's Wage Freeze

BRIGHTON, England, Sept. 7 (AP).—British trade unions today junked the voluntary wage-freeze policy that has been the Labor Government's strongest bulwark against inflation.

The action came at a conference of the Trades Union Congress, the backbone of the Labor Party. The TUC is made up of 190 unions with eight million members.

Rebelling against both the government and their own executives, the delegates voted 3,949,000 to 3,727,000 to throw out the restraint on demands for higher wages that has been official policy since the spring of 1948. Each delegate cast votes for all members of his union.

The action, threatening serious labor-management conflict, comes as Britain is seeking to rearm against Communist aggression.

When the wage restraint policy was first adopted in 1948, it had a majority of more than 2 million. At at TUC conference last January, this majority was cut to 657,000.

The TUC executive board tried in vain last June to stem the swing from the policy by approving higher wage demands of "lower-paid" workers—in general, those making £5 ($14) a week or less.

The Government had coupled the voluntary wage freeze with a request for business and industry to hold dividends at the 1947 level. There was general compliance, but there have been some increases in recent months.

Government statistics show average wages in Britain have gone up less than one percent since the pound was devalued last September from $4.03 to $2.80. Meanwhile, the cost of living index has climbed nearly three percent.

The creeping rise in the cost of living weakened the hand of the TUC leaders. The final blow came last week when the Labor government raised army pay rates from 10 to 75 percent to spur recruiting.

The vote today came on a resolution by the electrical workers union, which proposed (1) abandonment of the wage restraint policy and (2) Government control of profits by law.

The resolution declared "wage increases can be met without resulting in increased prices." One way, it said, is "by reducing profits."

The congress defeated four Communist candidates running for places on its 33-member general council, including Arthur Horner, Communist secretary-general of the National Union of Mine Workers.

Romance Taboo For Red Troops

ON THE MASAN FRONT IN SOUTH KOREA, Sept. 7 (AP).—Pin-up pictures and romance brought down the wrath of a political commissar in the North Korean army.

A captured diary taken from a dead political officer had these entries:

"Kim Chol Chong is in love with the daughter of the Pukson Hotel owner. . . . We had better punish him."

Another said the officers had been told to keep a special watch on soldiers who wrote letters, had pictures of girls, had female visitors or who spent lots of money.

The diary disclosed there was bad feeling between full Communist party members and members of the Communist youth league.

10 Children Killed In Runaway Truck

UDINE, Italy, Sept. 7 (AP).—Eighty screaming children rode a runaway truck and trailer down a mountain road near here today and off an embankment. First reports placed the toll at 10 killed and at least 30 injured.

The children, between the ages of 6 and 12, were being taken to a summer camp in the mountains north of here for an outing. Brakes of the heavy truck apparently failed.

School-Aid Bill Awaits Action By Truman

By the United Press

The Senate passed and sent to the White House yesterday 170 million dollars Federal aid bill to help States build urgently-needed schools.

The legislation, which President Truman requested, authorizes a three-year construction program with States matching Federal funds on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

It also provides 3 million dollars for a survey of the Nation-wide shortage of classroom space which has developed as a result of the sharp increase in the birth rate during and since World War II.

Because of rising building prices and other uncertain factors, officials could not estimate immediately just how many classrooms can be built. They said at least 150,000 are needed at once.

The bill stipulates that Federal aid funds may go only to school districts which fall into one of three categories:

1. Economically-backward areas where the local government cannot raise enough tax money tobuild the schools.

2. Federally-owned areas, such as the atomic towns of Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Hanford, Wash., where local governments have no responsibility for building schools.

3. Communities which have been swamped by children living on tax-free Federal lands, such as at military bases.

Officials said from 500 to 600 school districts will qualify for Federal aid.

Statehood Bills Trail 'Hill' Agenda

By The Associated Press

The Senate Democratic Policy Committee put Hawiian and Alaskan statehood bills at the end of its must legislative lists yesterday. But talk of strong opposition leaves it doubtful whether a vote can be reached on them.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, told reporters after a policy committee meeting that the Senate legislative program stacks up like this:

1. Finish up—probably early next week—with the pending anti-subversive legislation.

2. Call the calendar of routine bills.

3. Act on six minor bills against which some Senators have raised objections.

Once this is out of the way, Lucas said he will call up House-approved statehood bills for Hawaii and Alaska. President Truman has urged their approval but there is both Republican and Democratic opposition to their passage at this time.

Lucas told reporters he hopes to get action on the bills by September 16, target date for a Congressional vacation.

Much of the opposition has come from Southern Senators. This was pointed up again by Senator Russell (D., Ga.), who blocked an agreement Wednesday on fixing a time to vote on the anti-subversives bill now before the Senate, saying he wanted the policy committee first to lay down a specific agenda for the remainder of the session.

If a vote on the antisubversives bill is put off until Monday or later, any chance for passage of the Statehood bills would fade. Senators are anxious to avoid a drawn-out debate that would delay they return home.

Canada Imposes Corporate Levies And Luxury Taxes

OTTAWA, Sept. 7, (U.P.).—Canada tonight raised corporate income taxes five percent, effective Sept. 1, and slapped luxury levies on a wide range of items, from chewing gum to automobiles, to pay for the new Canadian defense program.

Finance Minister D. C. Abbott said the new corporation taxes would amount to 15 percent on taxable income up to $10,000 and 38 percent on corporate income above that level.

A 30-percent tax was levied on soft drinks, candy, chewing gum, and soda water used in fountain drinks.

Present taxes were raised one-third—from 10 to 15 percent on the manufacturers' price—on automobiles, photography equipment, furs, jewelry, clocks, radios, and smokers' supplies. No new tax was imposed on tobacco.

Montgomery Ward Sales Spurt 17.9% in Month

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co. today reported August sales of $112,568,206, compared with $95,517,108 in August last year, a gain of 17.9 percent. Giant Storm Moving North To Bermuda

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 7 (U.P.).—A giant hurricane, with winds swirling at 140 miles an hour, rumbled slowly northward tonight, threatening the British honeymoon isle of Bermuda.

The tropical storm, with an "eye" 30 miles in diameter, was flinging its vicious winds out 150 miles in all directions and was expected to pass just west of Bermuda.

The Miami weather bureau reported that the big blow was too far north to pose any threat to the Florida mainland. The storm was located about 850 miles east of Brunswick, Ga., and nearly 200 miles southwest of Bermunda.

This was the same storm that made several hundred homeless and cause more than one million dollars damages to the British island of Antigua nearly a week ago.

It crossed over the Leeward Islands and ploughed through the Atlantic while a small but powerful gulf hurricane was blowing itself out over inland Florida this week.

The gulf hurricane, according to chief storm forecaster Grady Norton of Miami, caused from $3,000,000 to $3,500,000 damages to the resort islands in the St. Petersburg area and to the fishing villages in the Cedar Keys section.

[In Lakeland, Fla., Robert C. Evans, general manager of the Florida Citrus Commission, told the Associated Press he expected little damage to Florida's bumper citrus crop from the high winds. He reiterated what others said—that the rains which the hurricane brought along were much more valuable to growers than any harm the wind might have caused.]

Dr. Weinbaum Is Found Guilty In West Coast Perjury Trial

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
DR. SIDNEY WEINBAUM
. . . after verdict

Los Angeles, Sept. 7 (AP).—A Federal court jury today convicted Dr. Sidney Weinbaum, jet-propulsion scientist, of perjury in denying before an Army board that he was a member of the Communist Party.

The jury of 11 women and one man found the scientist guilty of three counts of perjury and one of fraud. It deliberated three and one-half hours.

The fraud count charged that Dr. Weinbaum had concealed his membership in the Communist Party while he was at California Institute of Technology. The perjury counts involved his denial of Communist Party membership.

Weinbaum denied at his trial that he had ever been a Communist. The Government, however, said he had joined a party branch at Caltech in 1937, resigning in 1939.

Dr. Weinbaum was visibly shaken as the jury announced its verdict. He faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and $10,000 fine.

Until last year Dr. Weinbaum, 52, was a research engineer with a Government-sponsored jet-propulsion laboratory at Caltech. Government witnesses said he had access to classified material, including some listed as top secret.

Dr. Weinbaum was removed after a security check. He protested the removal and appealed to an Army industrial employment review board for reinstatement.

In connection with this appeal, Dr. Weinbaum was indicted.

Ballplayers Find Portion of Human Skull Near River

Part of a human skull was found by two young sandlot ballplayers yesterday afternon on the athletic field between the National Guard Armory, 20th and East Capitol sts., and the Anacostia River.

Homicide squad detectives were called to investigate the discovery. Detectives from the Fifth Precinct said that other human bones had been found in the same vicinity some months ago.

The skull piece was found by Ronald L. Gladden, 15, 100 19th st. se., and James P. Allen, 16, 1813 Independence ave. se., both members of the Southeast Boys Club.

Police were unable to estimate how long the bone had been exposed.

N. C. Visitor Reports $32 Loss in Holdup

A North Carolina visitor was held up and robbed of $32 when he stopped his car at a traffic light yesterday on Wilson blvd. at Ft. Myer dr., Arlington police reported.

The man, Rufus M. Brown, 39, of Franklinton, N. C., told police a slightly built Negro forced him to drive several blocks to some woods at Ridge rd. and N. 16th st. before robbing him of his keys and wallet at pistol point.

Common Link Discovered In 4 Diseases

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Science for the first time has found a "common denominator" linking cancer, tuberculosis, rheumatic fever and rheumatoid arthritis, an international team of scientists reported today.

The denominator is an abnormal amount of the simple sugar, fructose, found in the blood of patients suffering from any of the four diseases, which are among man's most crippling or lethal ailments.

The report was made to the 118th national meeting of the American Chemical Society by Dr. Washington Ayala Bonilla of the University of Montevideo, Uruguay, and Dr. Eugene L. Hess, of the Northwestern University Medical School.

They said it had been known that abnormal amounts of the sugar were present in cancer and tuberculosis victims, but that for the first time the same factor has been found in the case of rheumatic fever and rheumatoid arthritis.

The doctors said the discovery was both "interesting and significant."

"It indicates that in part at least the biochemical mechanism of these apparently unrelated diseases is similar," they said.

Mother Hurls 2 Sons, Self From Building

BOSTON, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—A young mother hurled her two young sons from a fourth story windoy today and then leaped after them, killing herself and the elder boy.

The woman, Mrs. Martha Fairburn, 28, of the South End was killed instantly. Her son Lance, 7, died later in a hospital. David, 2, was reported in poor condition with multiple fractures.

A score of witnesses saw the body of the first boy land on the sidewalk. As they looked up the bodies of Mrs. Fairburn and the other boy were hurling down to the street.

Mrs. Fairburn's husband was at a nearby store, telephoning his mother in Lowell to cancel a proposed visit because his wife had been "acting strangely."

25 Convicted Of Not Buying Alexandria Tags

Twenty-five persons were convicted in Alexandria Police Court yesterday on charges of failing to purchase 1950 city auto tags.

Seventeen defendants failed to appear in court and forfeited collateral of $5 apiece, while five others drew $5 fines when they informed Judge Harry F. Kennedy they had not yet purchased tags. Three who bought tags after receiving summonses drew suspended fines.

A systematic drive against owners of unlicensed autos has been under way for more than a month. Any automobile owner who keeps his vehicle in the city more than 30 days is required to purchase a tag, police said.

Plumber Is Fined Without License

A Seat Pleasant (Md.) man was convicted in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday of doing plumbing work without a proper license.

A spokesman for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission said the court action was the result of a newly launched crackdown on unregistered plumbers within the commission's jurisdiction.

The man, Wilson Fisher, of 625 Addison rd., pleaded guilty to four charges. He was fined $40 by Magistrate Alan Bowie.

Karl A. Young, chief plumbing inspector for the WSSC, said other unregistered plumbers would be prosecuted as violations come to light. Plumbers operating in the WSSC's jurisdiction in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties are required to obtain licenses from the commission.

College Merger

A merger of the District's two teachers colleges is commended alike by considerations of expediency and considerations of principle. Such a merger is urged in his annual report by Dr. Walter E. Hager, president of Wilson Teachers College, which is operated for white students only. "The Board of Education and the officers of the school system will render distinguished service," he says, "if they take this statesmanlike step."

The first reaction of the superintendent of schools, Dr. Hobart M. Corning, and of one member of the Board of Education was to ignore the merits of the report and discuss it instead in terms of the manner in which it became public. "I think a communication addressed to the superintendent of schools should arrive there before it is given to the public," said Dr. Corning. It is a matter of fact that Dr. Hager's report was sent to the superintendent in mid-August. A few days later copies of it were sent, quite naturally and properly, to members of the Board of Education and to interested school officials. There was nothing mysterious or secret about the document and no occasion for surprise that it should have found its way eventually into the hands of newspapermen. Indeed, it should have been released for publication long since by the superintendent himself. We think there is no warrant for withholding a responsible report of this kind. The community is entitled to discuss it and to consider its recommendations on their merits.

Dr. Hager points to the recent strides, particularly during the past year, toward use of community facilities without discrimination or segregation on account of race. "It is becoming increasingly clear," he says, "that schools generally have an opportunity and an obligation to help solve these problems . . . It is not clear how long the public schools of Washington can continue to operate a dual system. Probably it will be a number of years yet, but non-segregated schools seem to be in prospect as surely as is the ultimate victory of right over wrong." What better place could be found to make a start than in the teachers colleges! Their students are adult and, as Dr. Hager observed, are probably ready for the move now in both institutions. Moreover, when the time comes for an integrated school system we shall need teachers trained in a college free from segregation.

Both Wilson and Miner Teachers Colleges are now suffering from inadequate funds and facilities. Joined, they could do their vital work better and more economically. And they would help to bring the Capital of the United States into conformity with democratic principles. We think that Dr. Hager deserves the warmest commendation for bringing to the fore a proposal which should receive the Board of Education's most thoughtful attention.

British Crisis

The Attlee government has decided to ask for a vote of confidence next week when the British Parliament meets in special session. The issue is the Churchill charge of laxity on defense. Since the Labor government was returned to office in the recent general election, the successive votes of confidence seem to have been more or less phony, for the Conservatives have been loath to risk the anger and possible reaction of the people, and thus the tests have had the appearance of gestures. But this time the opposition may mobilize its strength for a genuine test of the government's power. If it succeeds, then the Attlee government would have to resign, though it might be possible to avoid another general election, by some device which would allow the King to ask Mr. Churchill to form a ministry.

The Attlee government has been under fire on a number of counts connected with defense. One of them is the tardiness in sending troops to Korea; two months elapsed before any contingent, a couple of battalions from Hongkong, arrived. In this procrastination, however, the British are not alone. All the others have been equally negligent. After the Korean aggression broke out the Dutch continued to ship home from Indonesia men with exactly the fighting experience needed in Korea. There has been a great to-do about offers of help, but action has been laggard. Perhaps the most ironical offer was from Thailand, which offered 10,000 men, though the unit was not even in being, let alone trained and ready for embarkation. Yet, if any nation should man the defenses in Korea, it is the small nations, for it is their rights that are in jeopardy by Stalinist action.

The Attlee government will have a five-seat majority when the vote of confidence is offered next week. And the Prime Minister will not have at his side either Mr. Bevin, who will be in New York for the Foreign Ministers conference, or Sir Stafford Cripps, who is ill. It will be a significant debate, for the country seems to have been roused by the gap in Europe, as well as the eloquent drive that Mr. Churchill has initiated for bigger and better rearmament and for a European army.

Detention Bill

A fresh approach to the Communist problem has been proposed by a group of Administration Senators as an alternative to the McCarran bill. It is legislation of a most drastic character, never before enacted or even seriously contemplated in the United States. There is a grave danger, we think, in drafting and adopting such a law hurriedly without patient hearings and searching debate. Nevertheless, the proposal seems to us markedly preferable to the McCarran measure. It is at once more realistic, strikes more effectively at dangerously disloyal persons and is more consonant with American traditions of individual freedom.

We have stated our objections to the McCarran bill on a number of occasions. It seems to us to deal with an imagined rather than a real threat to internal security. It would penalize men for their opinions and their associations—for mere membership in the Communist Party or in "Communist-front" organizations—on the premise, apparently, that their propaganda threatens to subvert the devotion of Americans to their own institutions. The terms under which it would do this seem to us so vague and embracive as to jeopardize fundamental civil rights. And, finally, we think it would help rather than hurt the Communists by blurring the distinction between them and loyal Americans who may have associated with them or expressed opinions paralleling theirs. It is a clumsy, unenforceable, blunderbuss piece of legislation.

The measure proposed as a substitute would cope, as the President has recommended, with existing threats of espionage and sabotage and, at the same time, with a real danger that has not yet arisen to the United States but that must be reckoned a serious contingency. It proposes a method of dealing with Communists and other foreign agents who might attempt or plan to commit espionage or sabotage in case of war or grave national emergency. To prevent these threats to internal security, it provides for internment of such persons by the Attorney General with a procedure for hearings, appeal to a board of detention review and a right of petition to a Federal Court of Appeals. Membership in the Communist Party subsequent to January 1, 1949, would be among the factors to be weighed in determining "reasonable ground" for detention.

It can scarcely be doubted that in case of war persons dangerous to internal security should—and would—be picked up at once by the FBI, whether specific legislation authorized the precaution or not. The proposed bill sets what appear to be reasonable standards for arrest and a satisfactory mechanism for review of cases in which arrest is unjustified. Thus it seems to us preferable to an arbitrary exercise of executive authority. Internal security would require the arrest of active Communist Party leaders and gauleiters; this would adequately blunt the party as a tool of a foreign government without any attempt to intern the entire rank and file. We think the proposed bill aims at an intelligently selective internment in the real interest of security and not at indiscriminate punishment of persons for the mere holding of disloyal or odious opinions.

There is no use blinking at the fact that this bill contemplates the creation of concentration camps and that these are repugnant to American values. It is unprecedented legislation. But it is contrived to deal with an unprecedented situation as were the detentions of such men as the Fascist leader Sir Oswald Mosley in liberty loving Britain when the Second World War broke out. The United States has never before had to deal with a small yet highly organized body of its own citizens deliberately serving a hostile, aggressive foreign country. It has never before had to deal with a situation which does not constitute war in the conventional sense but which entails a conflict involving nothing less than national survival. This ugly situation, however, should not be made a pretext for hurried, hysterical legislation imperiling our own best national traditions. We urge upon the Senate the most sober caution in trespassing upon the freedoms which are the wellsprings of American security. But adjustment to reality is the essence of statesmanship. The Senate must deal now with the substance and not with the shadows of the danger confronting it.

Wrong Address

However you may feel about the men who run the Soviet government, you cannot deny that they possesses, to a degree hitherto unknown among statesmen, the gift of impudence. Of this Mr. Malik has given us many choice examples; but the grand prize, we think, belongs to the author of the Soviet note concerning the Russian bomber that was shot down last Monday over the Yellow Sea off the Korean coast after it had opened fire upon a fighter patrol.

The text of the Soviet note follows almost point by point the pattern of the American note that was sent to Russia last April after an unarmed Navy bomber had been shot down over the Baltic by Russian planes. Thus the Soviet government asserts that its bomber was attacked while engaged upon a peaceful and routine training flight and that the attack occurred just inside the territorial limits of the naval base at Port Arthur in Manchuria. The Russian bomber, said the note, had offered no provocation for the attack. It had neither approached any American vessel nor opened fire on any American plane. Therefore, the Soviet government demanded the punishment of American military officers responsible for what was termed a flagrant violation of international law. It also demanded indemnities for the destruction of Soviet property and for the lives of three Soviet fliers who were said to have constituted the crew of the bomber.

This version is, of course, in complete contradiction to the statements of eye-witnesses, who agree that the Soviet bomber was headed directly toward an American (not British, as was at first reported erroneously) naval task force when the warnings of its approach were registered upon the radar screens. It was intercepted about 30 miles from the center of the task force. At this point, according to the witnesses, the bomber made a steep dive; the Corsairs followed, seeking to identify it. The bomber, having straightened itself at a lower level, opened fire in three bursts from its tail guns. Thereupon the leader of the patrol asked by radio for instructions from the task force and was ordered to shoot down the plane.

Ambassador Kirk at Moscow refused to accept the Soviet note on the ground that the American patrol was acting in the behalf and under the orders of the United Nations. This view has apparently been accepted at Lake Success, where Sir Gladwyn Jebb, overruling the objections of Mr. Malik, admitted both the official American report of the incident and the Soviet note of protest to the agenda of the Security Council, thereby making them a proper subject of debate.

It is fairly clear, then, that the Soviet government, for all its cheek and bluster, has no intention of magnifying the incident into a casus belli. Indeed, it is doubtful whether the Soviet leaders, if they were really determined upon full and outright war with the United States, would have gone to the delay and trouble of manufacturing an incident. As for accidents—and the appearance of the Russian bomber so near to the American task force might conceivably have been an accident—totalitarian governments, as Mr. George F. Kennan has observed, are far less likely than others to be impelled into war by popular hysteria.

Deserved Rebuke

When he attached his signature to the omnibus appropriations bill President Truman took occasion to administer a stinging rebuke to Congress for attaching a rider to the measure ordering him to reduce appropriations and authorizations by at least 550 million dollars without impairing the national defense. This requirement is, he charges, not in accord with sound budgetary procedure and "represents a failure by the Congress to exercise its proper responsibility for enacting appropriations to conduct the Government's business."

The mere fact that Congress approved a proposal that involves an arbitrary cut of such size is equivalent to a confession that it does not trust its appropriations committees to do a good job of budget revision. Fortunately the economy rider that was finally incorporated in the appropriations bill in conference as a substitute for the House-approved Taber and Jensen amendments and the Senate-approved Byrd amendment will, as The Washington Post recently said, enable the Government to save money in the right instead of the wrong way, since it permits the Administration to make selective reductions in outlays of Government agencies instead of compelling it to cut appropriations of designated agencies by specified amounts.

Of course, the fact that Congress finally approved an economy rider that will save money without forcing the President to make indiscriminate cuts in appropriations is no excuse for its failure to take the initiative in deciding where cuts shall be made. Moreover, as the President points out, there is no way of knowing whether savings to the extent arbitrarily required can be made without impairing essential Government services. Congress, working through its appropriations committees, should have resurveyed budget proposals to determine where cuts could be made in specific appropriations and authorizations, instead of leaving that task for the Budget Bureau. However, delay in passing the omnibus appropriations bill precluded a resurvey of this sort, with the result that the executive branch of the Government has to "revise the judgment of the Congress on individual programs to meet an over-all arbitrary reduction."

The President also expressed disapproval of the Spanish ECA loan rider, adding that he considered it an authorization, not a directive. He strongly implied that he would ignore this loan provision which, as we recently stated, "debases the principles back of Marshall aid, and is an impediment to unity across the Atlantic." In attaching this mischievous, irrelevant rider to the omnibus appropriations bill Congress has not only embarrassed the Administration, but it has supplied opponents of the single-package appropriations bill with fresh arguments for abandonment of a procedural reform that, if not abused, will enable Congress to vote more intelligently on spending projects and save money for the country's taxpayers.

REMEMBERING THE SUMMER

Save all such days, the big and hourly splendid Moments when the whistling beeches drummed,
Before the hung-with-lilac evenings ended,
Before your lips the summer ballad hummed.
Remember buds before the flowers thicken,
Remember roots before they feel the sun—
For all too soon the early tendrils sicken
And fester on the lattice one by one.
Though apples later scent the autumn corner
And cranes propel their lagging bodies south,
The season that I swear I wholly honor
Is cinders now upon this singing mouth,
While golden things on golden boughs are high

Letters To The Editor

"Mission To The Vatican"

I have read your editorial of August 10 concerning the United States diplomatic mission to the Vatican and I thank you for your fair and objective treatment of the question. You have been one of the few papers editorially to indorse the logic and appropriateness of such a mission which I note from the report of a national survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion at Princeton has the approval of the weight of public opinion. I think that you have properly summarized the matter by observing that the United States sends diplomatic missions to other states whose heads have religious as well as secular functions, that many non-Christian states have had missions to the Vatican for years and that no argument stronger than "prejudice" can be found for not sending a minister to the Holy See. I am grateful for your statement.

District Defense

Within the last few days, the Congress of the United States has displayed a cynical disregard for the safety of the key institutions of democracy which is both shocking and distressing.

When the Congress is in session, the President and every legal successor to the presidency are collected within the "area of total destruction" of a single bomb. Most of the central agencies of the Department of Defense are either within this area, or close to it.

Under the conditions which exist at present, a surprise bombing of the capital would offer Communists or other radical groups a unique opportunity for actually seizing control of the Federal Government. Even though no such seizure were attempted or even contemplated, such a bombardment could not fail to be disrupting and disorganizing, and would seriously hamper our war effort at a critical period.

Ever since the Russians achieved an atomic explosion, this possibility must have been an increasing temptation to them. Leaving such an opportunity open measurably increases the probability that the United States will be attacked, and correspondingly decreases the probability that the United States can survive if attacked.

Recently the President made a very modest proposal for reducing this danger. The Congress has seen fit to dismiss it with a few cheap wisecracks.

It is fervently hoped that the Congress will disavow this moment of total irresponsibility and immediately proceed to take the steps which the safety of the Republic requires. "Next January" may be too late.

Commercial Holidays

National holidays are days set aside by the United States Congress to commemorate certain heroic and sacred events in American history. Therefore, these days are intended to be respectfully observed by all Americans and residents in the United States.

At present there is a movement to desecrate our national holidays (and also some Christian religious holidays) by certain business people who are commercializing these events by putting on special sales. Since such conduct tends to destroy the significance of these holidays, it should be stopped at once.

There are enough days during the year to do business, and the few important secular and religious days we have should be kept entirely free of commercialization.

District Suffrage 1858

In the second Lincoln-Douglas debate held at Freeport, Ill., August 27, 1858, Senator Douglas challenged Abraham Lincoln to state his position on the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia. Lincoln replied: "I should be exceedingly glad to see slavery abolished in the District of Columbia. I believe that Congress possesses the constitutional power to abolish it. Yet as a member of Congress, I should not, with my present views, be in favor of endeavoring to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, unless it would be upon these conditions: First, that the abolition should be gradual; second, that it should be on a vote of the majority of qualified voters in the District; and third, that compensation should be made to unwilling owners. With these three conditions, I confess I would be exceedingly glad to see Congress abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, and in the language of Henry Clay, 'sweep from our capital that foul blot upon our Nation.'"

Less than 100 years ago the people of the District of Columbia could vote and Abraham Lincoln was willing to trust their judgment in determining a vital question. Today there is no vote and a few men in Congress decline to permit that body to vote on whether or not citizens of the Capital of these United States shall be trusted with the ballot. Certainly this small group who so brazenly flaunt their distrust of Democracy must face nights of unrest as a disturbing conscience compels them to realize that they are feeding the flames of Russian propaganda.

Advisory Group

Your attention is called to an article which appeared in The Washington Post dated September 1, 1950 and headed "Advisory Group—Civic Council Proposed for City Heads." A correction should be made in connection with the fifth paragraph, which is as follows: "Similar proposals for greater citizen participation in local government have been broached at the District Building in years past but have received something less than enthusiastic support."

The District of Columbia did have a Citizens Advisory Council, which was organized in 1925 at the suggestion of Col. J. Franklin Bell, who was the Engineer Commissioner at the time. A plan was submitted to the Commissioners by the Federation of Citizens Associations, which plan was approved and the Citizens Advisory Council of the District of Columbia was formed, it being an unofficial body. The council operated successfully for several years, and a search of the record will show that the first Legislative Report of the Council was printed as a public document by the House District Committee.

I note also that your paper states that a suggestion has been made that the president of the Federation of Citizens Associations should act as council chairman. I feel that a citizens advisory group is greatly needed by the District and that a newly created one would be very helpful but I also feel in the creation of such a group it certainly would be more satisfactory and democratic to have the council elect its own chairman.

As a former member of the old (District of Columbia) Advisory Council I submit this letter for the record.

Caribbean Trouble

It is my firm belief that the inter-American system will be jeopardized, and the United States will lose the support of millions of progressive Latin Americans in the struggle against international Communist aggression, if both the State Department and the Organization of American States continue the present policy of appeasing Latin American dictators.

The United States needs a positive policy in Latin America if what is happening in Asia is to be prevented in this hemisphere. It is true that under the stress of the Korean crisis the people of Latin America have drawn closer to the United States, as happened after Pearl Harbor, and that all the Latin American Republics supported, in the United Nations Security Council, the resolutions ordering "cease fire," and called upon the member states to give every possible aid to the Republic of Korea in its fight against aggression.

But it is also true that there is a grim irony in the fact that while the fight against Communist aggression in Korea is urged by the United Nations, Raphael Trujillo is permitted to massacre his own people. How can the United Nations convince the progressive Latin American peoples that it is a fight for freedom from tyranny, when a week before the Communist aggression in Korea the Dominican tyranny perpetuated one of the most horrible crimes against humanity without being condemned by any international organization?

On June 2, Gen. Federico Fiallo, upon orders from his master, the "benefactor of the fatherland" killed in cold blood, Mr. Porfirio Ramirez Alcantara, a brother of General Miguel Angel Ramirez, military leader of the "Caribbean Legion," and his companions, including a woman. This horrifying murder was neither condemned nor denounced by the "watchdog" committee of the Organization of American States established to insure compliance by the states involved in the Caribbean imbroglio, of the recommendations set forth by the Council of American States, to stop the feuding between the Dominican dictatorship and the democratic governments of this area. Instead of denouncing this horrible crime the "watchdog" committee had the audacity to issue a statement pointing out that the trouble in the Caribbean had definitely quieted down, and went so far as to declare that an "atmosphere of understanding and good will" prevailed in that area.

It is also important to point out that this massacre of Trujillo's regime took place while high officials of the American Embassy in Havana were having unofficial conversations with the Dominican Charge d'Affaires in Cuba, Mr. Bernardino, to secure the adoption by the Dominican government of certain guarantees for the return of some Dominican exiles in Cuba.

To tackle this problem which might bring again a situation of unrest and revolutionary activities in the Caribbean, we ask only that both the Organization of American States and the State Department take such steps as will discourage Trujillo from continuing his ruthless policy of political murders, which is a challenge to every principle of our democratic inter-American system.

Truman Loses To The Marines

By Marquis Childs

President Defeated

IF PRESIDENT TRUMAN had tried the worst possible time to make his unfortunate remarks about the Marine Corps, he could not have succeeded more admirably. At any time it would have been bad. Under the circumstances it showed a positive genius for mistiming.

On August 12 General Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the Marine Corps, announced that additional Marines were on their way to Korea. Anyone able to add two and two could determine that these Marine Corps units would be arriving in Korea at a fortunate time.

The American position is again serious if not critical. Thrown into the line at once, the Marines could save the day as they have so often done in our past history.

The President's offhand remarks in his note to an inquiring Congressman show so little comprehension of one of the basic problems growing out of unification. That was to preserve and cherish the best traditions of the separate services while carrying out a merger essential for both efficiency and economy.

In a nation dedicated to the arts of peace there are few fighting traditions adhering through the years to an organization or a uniform. The Marine Corps embodies the strongest of these traditions in America. Besides fighting most of America's enemies, the Marines have engaged in combat repeatedly at home to preserve the integrity of their Corps and the record of their valor.

IN THE PACIFIC during World War II they covered themselves with glory in one fierce and bloody engagement after another. In Tarawa and On To Westward, two of the most vivid battle accounts to come out of the war, Robert Sherrod describes some of this fighting.

Yet the Marines have had a strong feeling that their record in the Pacific in part, at least, has gone unrecognized. Chief resentment is directed at General MacArthur. It was said that MacArthur never acknowledged the part they played in the heroic defense of Corregidor.

Several Presidents have clashed with the Marines and the Marines have sooner or later come out of those encounters victorious. The first President—and since he's President Truman's hero maybe inspired him—was Andrew Jackson. This is shown in a brief history prepared by a Marine Corps officer who has the characteristic pride of the Corps. But the history was never made public for fear that it would fan the unification quarrel.

"Details for Marine service could as well be made from the artillery or infantry, there being no peculiar training requisite for it," Jackson wrote in 1829 of Marine recruitments.

The Marine Corps had been in existence 54 years. The Marines took their story to Congress and Old Hickory was slapped down. Then the Marines went back to fighting Indians in the Creek and Seminole war.

ANOTHER PRESIDENT who tried to incorporate the Marines with the Army was Theodore Roosevelt. In the suppressed Marine Corps history this section is headed, "The Big Stick Strikes Out." T. R. ordered Marine combat units off 13 naval vessels. Again Congress came to the rescue inserting in the Appropriations Act of 1910 the following:

"Provided that no part of the appropriations herein made for the Marine Corps shall be expended for the purposes for which said appropriations are made unless officers and enlisted men shall serve as heretofore on board all battleships and armored cruisers and also upon such other vessels of the Navy as the President may direct, in detachments of not less than 8 per centum of the strength of the enlisted men of the Navy on said vessels."

President Truman prides himself on his knowledge of history, and especially military history. Recently, in response to an inquiry from a newspaper correspondent, he took time to write in his own hand a series of memoranda on famous battles of the past, going back to Hannibal and the trouble that famous Carthaginian soldier had with the elephants carrying his supplies across the Alps. But if he had known a little more about the history of the Marine Corps, the President would have known that a Marine can be just about twice as stubborn and unforgetting as any elephant that ever lived.

War Headlines

In your front page report of September 4 your headline reads as follows, "Marine losses in Korea 177, but only 3 dead." The use of the word only connotes the idea of insignificance. Lives are not just some other expendable property; but when we state that "only three were killed," we are placing life in a category along with guns and tanks, etc. Only one mght be killed in some particular action, but that one might be my son or yours.

An article which states that only five tanks or only two planes were lost is bad enough because we know that lives were also lost. But to state that only so many people were killed, regardless of the number in relation to the whole, is treating life too lightly. Probably one of the reasons behind the declaration of aggressive war is the low value attached to the lives of the men who will have to do the fighting.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Guilty

WITH UNITED STATES FORCES IN KOREA. When the situation is "fluid," which in this war means wholly unstable and quite possibly disastrous, this reporter cannot compete with his colleagues who write for tomorrow's paper. It may be helpful, all the same, to try to explain why we are so suddenly suffering a fearful reverse here. It is a long, bitter and significant story, which ends with Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson.

In brief, during the past week, the enemy managed to mount a primitive but massive offensive, using his limited stocks of heavy military equipment only in big areas, but lavishly expending manpower everywhere. Albeit with shocking losses, this offensive was frustrated in the American sectors of the line, justifying the new American self-confidence lately reported in this space. In the long South Korean sector, however, a major breakthrough has been achieved. And as these words are written, the outcome is totally uncertain.

No doubt the Pentagon will now revive the silly canard of its first days of the war, that the South Koreans will not fight. But the plain truth is that the South Korean divisions had been fighting continuously in the line for anywhere from 60 to 70 days. They had sustained appalling casualties—one regiment, known to this reporter has lost no less than 3000 men, or three times the number on its muster rolls. And they had still held on although they were often ill-supplied with small arms ammunition, food and even water, and although they frequently had trouble, because of poor communications, in securing needed artillery and air support.

In these circumstances, it is not necessary to ask why the South Koreans broke at last under heavy enemy attack. The question is, rather, why such an excessive burden was imposed upon them for so long. The answer is simple. Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker well knew the South Koreans' difficulties and did his best to remedy them. He also knew well that the burden was excessive. But he was forced to take the risk, because he did not have enough American troops to relieve our allies, by shortening the South Korean sector of the defense perimeter.

THIS MAY surprise people at home, who heard the President's recent announcement that we have five American divisions in Korea. Unfortunately, however, this announcement merely provoked the men in the line in Korea to grim, coarse laughter. Present troop strength cannot be discussed in detail, but the realities of the situation may be suggested by having a look at the past.

Using the word "division" in the same way, the President might have said a month ago that we had three divisions in Korea, the Twenty-fourth, the Twenty-fifth and the First Cavalry. Since three divisions constitute a corps, any informed person would then have assumed that the usual strength and power of a corps were thus being brought to bear. But anyone making that assumption would have been sadly deluded.

The divisions themselves were condemned to feebleness, in the first place, when Secretary of Defense Johnson, on taking office, arbitrarily gutted what the President had left of the late James V. Forrestal's American rearmament program. In order to retain the divisional structures, regiments were kept at two-thirds strength without their third battalions; no divisional armor was provided except the light tanks, useful only for reconnaissance; and grave shortages were accepted in artillery, communications and other essential supports.

In the seond place, only a few months before the Korean war broke out, Secretary of Defense Johnson issued supplementary "economy" orders. The existing corps organizations, which are intermediate between division and army and serve as pools for heavy weapons, were therefore necessarily impressed. And this meant that there would be none of the vital corps tanks, no powerful corps artillery, no corps signals or administrative structures.

Such was the inner nature, in the Army, of the famous process of "cutting fat but not muscle" and getting ready to "lick Joe Stalin." The result, according to an official estimate from the highest source, was to leave the first three divisions that entered Korea with less than one-half the normal fire power of an equivalent grouping at war strength.

It is true that some of the worst gaps in our forces here have recently been filled, the expedient of committing the American strategic reserve in Korea in a time of universal peril in the world. But even so, the President must have been gravely misled by interested persons when he claimed we had five divisions in the field—unless a division is to mean a mere half empty shell with an official number. That is why the foxholes in the American line are still spaced at intervals of 60 yards, and why the American line could not be further extended.

SOME may argue that General Walker ought to have shortened the whole defense perimeter, American and South Korean, by further reducing the beachhead. Certainly he was strongly encouraged not to do so by the Pentagon, so hungry for blame-erasing victory, so fearful of the political repercussions of retreat. At any rate, in all fairness, even in this moment of crisis, it must be said that General Walker has done wonderfully well to hold the Chindong-Taegu-Pohang defense line for so long with such poor resources.

Once before, at Taejon, he barely saved his whole position from disintegration. A little later, when the enemy first strongly threatened the approaches to Pusan, he blocked the threat with a single regiment, three tanks, and his own Army headquarters security company. This brisk, stout, unpretentious small man has never been rattled, and has always made a little go a very long way. If he fails now, it will not be his fault.

In plain words, it will be the fault of those who defrauded the American people, claiming they were making America strong when they were making America weak. This evening, because of that weakness, all is chaotic. At worst, the present crisis could produce catastrophe. At best, it will end with the loss of vital positions, dearly bought with the blood of young Americans. When one has seen these young men, hopeful and brave and full of good gifts, fall thus in battle, it is hard not to demand a just and ruthless penalty from the guilty men, the tellers of untruths, the organizers of weakness and disaster.

Perhaps this is too much to ask, however, in view of Truman's incurable loyalty to the third rate, and the natural fellow feeling of so large an element in Congress for whatever is shabby, fraudulent and political. From this perhaps peculiar angle of vision, a Republican leadership that howls against an Acheson while a Johnson is almost lovingly embraced, a President who seems to take pride in shielding his worst subordinates from the smallest retribution, look like symptoms of the decay of our political institutions. And so it may not matter any way whether the line here in Korea holds or not.

In Case of War

FBI Is Ready To Arrest 12,000 Reds

By The Associated Press

The FBI has tagged 12,000 most dangerous Communists and is ready to seize them in case of war with Russia, J. Edgar Hoover is reported to have told Senators yesterday.

Hoover, FBI director, went before a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee in closed session to tell why he needs $6,000,000 more for agents and other workers.

Senators quoted Hoover as saying he wants to be able to keep careful tab on dangerous Reds; so close a watch as "to put these people to bed at night and get them up in the morning."

Hoover said half the 12,000 are American citizens, many of them native born. This complicates the problem.

The director was quoted as saying it would be up to the Justice Department to decide whether the American Reds could be arrested immediately, along with the aliens.

Checking On 50,000 Reds

Senators said the FBI has been keeping a check on 50,000 known Communists.

Legislation intended to curb the activities of Communists, spies, and subversies in general moved through a third day of debate in the Senate with a vote possible Tuesday. Administration backers centered their fire on the bill, a broad proposal by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) which has a strong chance of adoption.

The Senate, after long wrangling, finally reached a unanimous consent agreement yesterday to vote on the measure beginning at 1 p. m. EDT next Tuesday. Debate time will be allowed for each amendment.

But Mr. Truman's assertion at his news conference that he won't sign the McCarran bill if it passes put a formidable obstacle in its path, possibly an insurmountable one.

The President, who has sponsored a series of Communist control steps of his own, told his news conference that the McCarran bill is the same as the Republican Mundt-Nixon bill, but a little worse.

Mr. Truman's warning of his intentions provoked answering blasts from supporters of the McCarran measure. McCarran told reporters he wonders if Mr. Truman has read the bill.

'No Time to Be Soft'

Republican Floor Leader Wherry (Nebr.) said he was "convinced that we need the McCarran bill to do the job. This is no time to be soft with Communists."

Senator Russell (D., Ga.) observed, "I hope that he (Mr. Truman) will reflect on that again as he did on his letter about the Marines."

This was a reference to the President's public apology for calling the Marine Corps a Naval police force and charging that it has a propaganda machine almost equal to Stalin's.

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) told the Senate that the McCarran bill "will enable the FBI to do what it cannot do: proceed directly against these Communist violators. We must see to it that a measure goes out of here with teeth."

A-Plant Makes Fish In River Radioactive

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Hanford, Wash., atomic plant is making the Columbia River and its fish radioactive, a plant official said today.

But, H. M. Parker, Hanford health manager, told a conference on disposal of radioactive wastes that the river is radioactive to such a slight degree that the water is drunk safely by populations of several small cities.

"To date," he added, "the radioactive fish are quite safe to eat—unless you are such a glutton that you could eat 100 pounds at one sitting, or eat 10 pounds daily for 10 days."

Chapman Denies Red Charges

mittee hearing because he wanted his administrative assistant, Frank T. Bow, to be present. Bow, it appeared, had done the research behind Schoeppel's charges. He is currently campaigning against Representative McSweeney (D., Ohio) for the latter's seat in the House.

Schoeppel himself told reporters afterward that Chapman had made "a forthright statement." As for himself, Schoeppel went on, he had merely raised some questions that he thought should be answered.

Then why had he not telephoned Chapman for the answers, as Chapman suggested he might have done, before making the Senate speech, a newsman asked. Schoeppel did not reply.

'Appreciate Your Tenderness'

Chapman himself had some words on Schoeppel's mere "questions." One of them, as Schoeppel phrased it to the Senate, asked if Chapman committed perjury in connection with his loyalty affidavit and whether he "is now subject for grand jury investigation along with Remington and Alger Hiss?"

"That's such a nice reference, Senator," said Chapman with heavy sarcasm. "I appreciate your tenderness there."

Another of Schoeppel's stated questions was whether Chapman had been "forced to choose between the alternatives of perjury or exposure?"

"Another one of those nice delicate questions," Chapman observed, "not intended to impugn one's reputation, I'm sure."

Summary of Charges

Below is a summary of Schoeppel's charges and Chapman's replies:

1. Chapman had a "deal" with the Governor of Alaska, Ernest Gruening, to appoint Feltus as a public relations adviser on Alaska statehood. Chapman said he was told by Gruening after the decision was made to employ Feltus. He had nothing to do with the appointment and there was no reason why he should have.

2. Chapman attempted to sabotage the Government's policy in Formosa by refusing to loan a Reclamation Bureau engineer to work for a private concern there developing irrigation.

Chapman pointed out that the engineer is now in Formosa, at work for the company, and has been for some time. Furthermore it was he, Chapman, who made the loan arrangement possible, on request by Senator Knowland (R., Calif.).

3. Chapman was a member of the American League Against War and Fascism. Chapman denied it categorically.

4. He sponsored a meeting under the auspices of the Descendants of the American Revolution, allegedly subversive. Chapman said he had no memory or record of such action, and that furthermore, the organization was not listed by the Attorney General as subversive.

Human Welfare Dinner

5. He attended a dinner in 1947 of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Chapman said he was chairman of the arrangements committee; the dinner was in honor of Justice Hugo L. Black; an honorary vice chairman was Harry S. Truman; the principal speaker was Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, and the toastmaster was Alben W. Barkley.

6. Chapman was a sponsor of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship. True, said the Secretary, but in 1946, a year before the Attorney General declared the organization to be subversive, he wrote the group withdrawing permission to use his name as a sponsor.

7. When he took the oath of office as Undersecretary of Interior, on March 27, 1946, two paragraphs on the printed form were stricken out, one of them an affidavit that the signer does not advocate overthrow of the Government by force or violence. Not until July 16, 1947, did Chapman execute such an affidavit.

The inference, Schoeppel had said, was that Chapman risked perjury if he signed that statement in 1946, but by 1947 had purged himself of "open connections with subversive organizations."

To this Chapman produced photostats of the affidavit of loyalty he signed in 1941 and another, in response to a new legal requirement, which he signed on June 11, 1946.

He pointed out that in the "ceremonial" swearing in, only the oath of office is sworn to, while the official signs the other affidavits, tedious to read, in private before appropriate departmental officers.

Senator Anderson (D., N. Mex.), a member of the committee, brought out that this is the universal practice among high executive department officers who have a ceremonial swearing in. Only the oath, not the additional affidavit and declarations, is read at the public ceremony.

Procedure for Senators

In a bit of comedy, Chairman O'Mahoney put Senate Secretary Leslie Biffle, and Senate Disbursing Officer Oco Thompson on the stand, to bring out that this is exactly the same procedure that Senators themselves follow.

But Chapman demanded of Schoeppel an explanation of why his assistant, Bow, who has seen all Chapman's affidavits in the Interior Department files in 1948, had apparently given Schoeppel only the ones suggesting that he refused to take the loyalty oath. Or had Schoeppel actually seen the others and chosen not to mention them, Chapman asked. Schoeppel did not explain.

The Delegate to Congress from Alaska, E. L. Bartlett, also testified yesterday to deny what he felt were insinuations in Schoeppel's speech that he had misappropriated Alaskan funds, for lobbying activities.

Bartlett Backed Feltus

Bartlett said that the initiative in the decision to hire Feltus had been his. Later, he discovered that Feltus had worked for the Polish Ambassador here. At that point, Feltus volunteered to withdraw from his contract, and Bartlett accepted the offer.

Feltus himself appeared briefly on the stand, but will give his side of the story in more detail this morning. He vehemently denied ever being a Communist. He insisted his connection with the Poles was purely to stimulate more trade, and that he never lobbied for them in Congress or the State Department. He resigned the job in 1949, but conceded it may have been an error in judgment not to have done so sooner.

SENATOR SCHOEPPEL (LEFT) AND CHAPMAN MEET

Invitation to Speak At Celebration Canceled

BELLINGHAM, Wash., Sept. 7 (AP).—An invitation to Interior Secretary Chapman to speak at the international boundary peace arch celebration September 22 has been canceled.

Dr. George N. Anderson of Lynden, chairman of the speaker's committee, said it was because of a Congress member's questioning of Chapman's record.

Anderson announced two weeks ago that Chapman would deliver the address for the annual gathering of United States and Canadian school children and veterans. He said he learned shortly afterward that accusations would be made of a personal relationship of Chapman to the Russian cause. He said he immediately canceled the invitation.

Senator Schoeppel (R., Kans.) made the accusations in the Senate yesterday.

Truman Not to Sign Bill

closed, Mr. Truman smiled and said he did.

"Mr. President," a reporter said, "two Democratic Senators have issued conflicting predictions as to what you would do to the McCarran antisubversive bill. One says you will veto it and the other says you won't."

Mr. Truman wanted to know if he meant the Mundt-Nixon bill.

The reporter said he meant that bill with amendments.

The Chief Executive said that this was worse than the original, and recalled that at the time of the Dewey-Stassen debate in Oregon in 1948 he made the statement that he wouldn't sign the Mundt-Nixon bill.

In a message on August 8, Mr. Truman told Congress what he wanted in the way of legislation to deal with spies and saboteurs. He also told Congress what he didn't want. It was assumed that he had the Mundt-Nixon bill in mind when he said in that message:

"Ineffective, Dangerous"

"Legislation is now pending before the Congress which is so broad and vague in its terms as to endanger the freedoms of speech, press and assembly protected by the First Amendment.

"Some of the proposed measures would, in effect, impose severe penalties for normal political activities on the part of certain groups, including Communist Party-line followers. This kind of legislation is unnecessary, ineffective and dangerous."

At yesterday's news conference, Mr. Truman did not use the word veto in talking about the Mundt-Nixon bill as revised by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.). He simply recalled that he had once said he wouldn't sign any such bill. Whether his avoidance of the word "veto" was deliberate, the reporters had no way of knowing.

He could let the bill become a law without his signature, if Congress were still in session at the time the deadline for signing arrived. If, however, Congress had adjourned when the deadline arrived, he would have two alternatives—to veto it outright or to let it die through a pocket veto.

Bosox Belt Yanks, Tigers Slip Into First

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Blue Plate Special:

THE SECOND-GUESS department was reactivated the other day when Manager Eddie Dyer of the Cardinals gambled and lost on the most unorthodox maneuver of the season. With his Cardinals leading the Pirates by a run, two out and the tying run on second base in the tenth inning, Dyer tempted his critics.

He deliberately ordered Ralph Kiner walked against all copy-book maxims that say you dassn't put the winning run on base. Dyer's judgment didn't ring the bell. It exploded it. Gus Bell, next up, doubled both runs home, and the Cardinals were a gone gang.

Povich

In extenuation of Dyer's strategy, it must be observed that Kiner had just hit two homers previously in the game. But even that fact doesn't satisfy the school that insists "Make 'em beat you with a hit if you're gonna lose. Don't put that winning run on."

Yet Bucky Harris is one who doesn't find it in his heart to criticize Dyer. "I did the same thing and lost a World Series game in 1947," recalled Harris. "We had the Dodgers beat 2 to 1 in the ninth with two out and a man on second. And Bill Bevens was pitching a no-hitter. They sent Pete Reiser in as a pinch-hitter, and I had Bevens walk him. I was frankly scared of what Reiser might do to us.

"So up comes Cookie Lavagetto with a double to right, the only hit off Bevens, and we lose the ball game, 3 to 2. I've had three years to think over what happened and I'll say this much: I'd do it again."

OUT OF THE WELTER of conflicting reports as to the cause and circumstances of Joe Louis' comeback, comes the straight story from Louis himself in the current issue of Ebony magazine.

In a signed article, Louis clears it all up pretty well. The need for money to pay his taxes is the motive of his comeback, but the why and the how he tells for the first time.

"It's the only way I could ever make the money I need, and I owe the Government a lot of money in back taxes that came about from some old tax reports. I had everything just about straightened out, but the Government wouldn't accept my returns in 1946 when Marva and I were divorced.

"The fellow who was my accountant then had listed a 25 per-cent deduction on my earnings for Marva because that was the way we agreed to have it after the divorce. She was one of my co-managers, and what she got was divided equally between her and the kids, Jackie and Punchy.

"The Government said that this was a divorce settlement and not exempt from taxes. I guess they're right, so I'll have to pay up . . . My mother doesn't want me to fight again, but I know she understands I have to pay what I owe. When she was on relief in Detroit during the depression and got $270 from the Government, she paid it back out of the first money I earned fighting."

WHETHER THE RED SOX wind up with the pennant or not, it must be observed that Manager Steve O'Neill has an excellent chance of winding up with ulcers. The kind of pitching he is trying to win with is another way of asking for a bland diet.

The other day in an attempt to beat the Nats, O'Neill had to haul no fewer than three starting pitchers into the game—Joe Dobson, Chuck Stobbs and Ellis Kinder. Yesterday against the Yankees O'Neill's fouled-up pitching staff was on parade again with six starters in one ball game—Kinder, Nixon, McDermott, Masterson, Dobson and Stobbs.

If O'Neill does emerge with the pennant out of that sort of a pitching mess, he will qualify not only as the manager of the year, but of the decade. The state of the Red Sox pitching, as much as any other factor, put Joe McCarthy in a sick bed and caused him to quit.

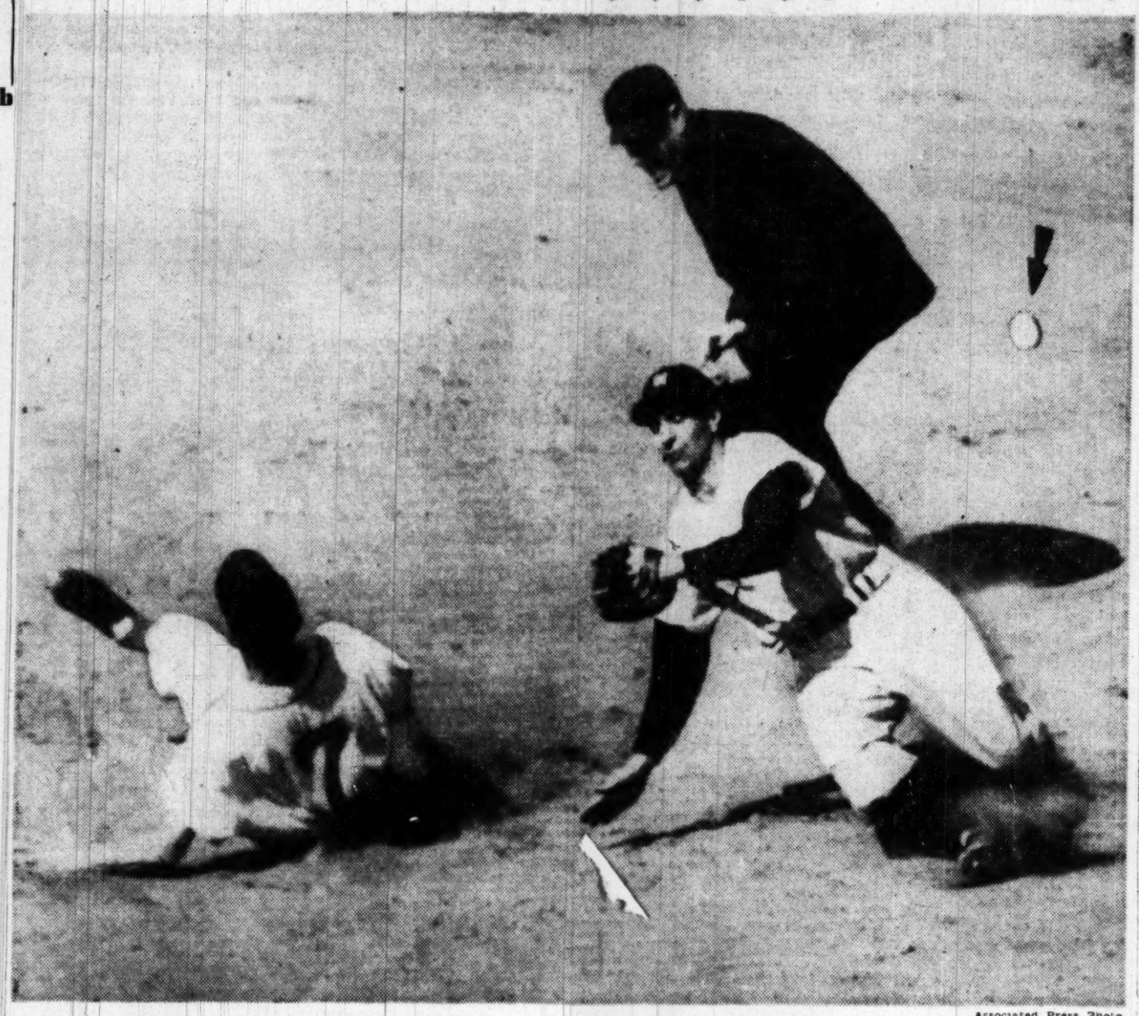
You'd have to say that the Red Sox, with those two desperation wins over the Yankees in the last two days, are making a gallant stand of it. But final opinion on the Red Sox must be deferred until after next week when they take to the road again, away from friendly Fenway Park. In recent years, the road has been paved with the wreckage of Red Sox pennant hopes.

IF YOU CAN TRUST the betting odds on tonight's Willie Pep-Sandy Saddler featherweight title fight in Yankee Stadium, Saddler will ride again and take home the title he originally won from Pep a couple of years ago. On that occasion he knocked Pep out in four rounds. A year later he was outpointed by Pep.

The pre-battle statements don't give the betting fan much of a clue as to what will happen, however. Out of Pep's camp comes the confident declaration "I expect to retain my title by beating Saddler. But I am not predicting a knockout."

From the Saddler camp, the challenger is saying: "This time, Pep will have to knock me out to beat me."

Pep's confidence, however, would seem to be not quite complete. He insisted on a gimmick in the contract that assures him another fight with Saddler if his confidence in himself tonight happens to be trifle misplaced.



ON A WILD THROW—Dom DiMaggio of the Red Sox steals second and the throw by Catcher Yogi Berra of the Yankees is too wide for Shortstop Phil Rizzuto to reach in the third inning of yesterday's New York-Boston game in Boston. Umpire is Bill Grieve. Boston won, 10-8, sweeping the 2-game series at Fenway Park to near the top

Dropo Smashes 2 Homers, Bats Across Five Runs

BOSTON, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Boston Red Sox bolstered their pennant hopes by grinding out a 10-8 victory over the New York Yankees today to sweep the crucial two-game series.

Big Walt Dropo drove in five runs with two homers and a double. The feat enabled Dropo to regain the circuits runs-batted-in lead from teammate Junior Stephens by a 136-133 margin.

Rival Managers Steve O'Neill of the Sox and Casey Stengel of the Yanks pulled almost every possible stop before 29,897 fans.

Ted Williams, out of the Red Sox line-up since the All-Star game with a fractured elbow, returned in the fifth inning as a pinch hitter and drew an intentional pass.

The game wound up with Lefty Chuck Stobbs, the sixth Boston pitcher, coming in with the bases loaded and two out and ruining Johnny Hopp's first bid for American League stardom.

Hopp, a .340-slugger before being waivered by the Pittsburgh Pirates this week, worked Stobbs for a 3-2 count and then ended the game by taking a waist high fireball for the third strike.

The Red Sox started out with Right Hander Ellis Kinder and gave him a flying start by blasting Allie Reynolds for four runs.

Evers Hits Homer, 2 Triples, Double Before Darkness

Detroit, Sept. 7 (AP).—The courageous Detroit Tigers battled their way back into the American League lead today as they fought the Cleveland Indians to a 13-13 draw in a 10-inning slugfest stopped by darkness.

Detroit's Hoot Evers kept the Tigers in the ball game practically single-handed as he slammed out his twenty-first homer, two triples, a double and a single and batted in six runs.

The Tigers had an uphill grind all the way after Cleveland knocked out Tiger ace righthander Art Houtteman in a seven-run first inning.

Larry Doby boomed a two-run homer off Hank Borowy in the tenth, his 22d round-tripper, to move Cleveland out in front again 13-11.

But the Tigers were far from through as they teed off on Marina Pieretti, fifth Cleveland pitcher, in their half of the tenth. Successive singles by Vic Wertz and Evers, plus a walk to Johnny Groth, loaded the bases before 26,617 enthusiastic fans.

Wertz was out at home on Jerry Priddy's slow roller, but Joe Ginsberg flied deep, Evers scoring after the catch. Pinch-Hitter Charley Keller singled Groth home with the tying run. Don Kolloway then grounded out and the game was over.

Griffs Lose To Macks, 4-2

By Shirley Povich

Hank Wyse, the old National Leaguer who bobbed up with the Athletics this season, gave the Nats a four-hit brushoff for eight innings last night and then staggered to a 4-2 victory in the ninth.

The contest, played in the semi-privacy of only 2863 fans, was bossed completely by Wyse's pitching until the Nats suddenly bestirred themselves with two out in the ninth and jolted him out of the ball game.

Going into that last inning, the Nats hadn't come within 180 feet of scoring a run on the crafty Wyse who permitted only two Nats to achieve second base.

In fact, Wyse on two occasions was only one pitch away from a shutout. With two strikes against him, Mickey Vernon singled in the ninth. Sam Mele doubled to right, and Cass Michaels got both runs home with a single on a 2-2 pitch.

At that point, the A's management beckoned Bob Hooper to take charge and on three pitches he got rid of Sam Dente on a pop-up.

The A's achieved all of their runs against Gene Bearden in the first four innings, maintaining a two-hits-per-inning pace against the Nats' southpaw who obviously wasn't as sharp as when he stopped the Tigers in his last start.

Bearden was pitching a lively ball, or something. Kermit Wahl whacked him for a triple over Coan's head in the second inning with two out, and scored on Astroth's single to center.

The A's upped their lead to 3-0 in the third, again with two out. Joost who walked, and Moses who singled, both romped home on a noisy three-bagger by Valo off the wall in right center.

Doting on extra-base hits, the A's got their fourth run in the fourth, with two out as usual. Astroth was on base when Joost pumped a two-bagger off the bleacher wall in left center.

In the last five innings, the A's were held to two hits by Bearden, and Connie Marrero and Mickey Harris who finished up. Marrero turned in three scoreless innings in an attempt to keep the Nats in the ball game but it was sort of useless.

Redskins Lace Yanks For 5th in Row, 24-7

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 7.—Capitalizing on every break, the Washington Redskins ended their exhibition season unbeaten tonight, walloping the slightly-favored New York Yanks, 24-7, before 13,121 Blue Stadium fans.

The success was Washington's fifth in a row and the defeat brought the Yanks' pre-season record to two victories and two defeats.

In addition to doing a magnificent job of punting, Sammy Baugh passed for two Redskin touchdowns, one to Bill Dudley and the other to Chuck Drazenovich, rookie fullback from Penn State.

The Baugh-Dudley maneuver, a 52-yard play which saw Dudley reverse his field twice and run 58 yards, followed a recovery of a blocked punt by Fullback Bob Goode late in the first quarter.

In the second quarter, Hall Haynes ran 46 yards to the Yanks' 38-yard line to set up the second Redskin touchdown. A pass interference penalty against New York's Joe Golding gave the Redskins the ball on the New York 1-yard line and Harry Gilmer went over on a quarterback sneak.

The Redskins scored 10 points in the third quarter. Dudley, who kicked all three points after touchdowns, booted a 44-yard field goal after Guard John Badaczewski had recovered a New York fumble on the Yanks' 37-yard line.

Pete Stouts' interception of a Johnny Rauch pass on the New York 18-yard line late in the same period led to the last Washington touchdown.

Baugh climaxed the short push by passing to Drazenovich for the score.

With about four minutes to play, Art Weiner recovered a Baugh fumble. Quarterback Johnny Rauch passed 46 yards to End Bob Mann for the Yanks' only tally. Rauch, also kicked the extra point.

FIRST QUARTER

The Redskins won the toss and elected to receive. Sammy Baugh circled right end for 14 yards, giving the Redskins a first down on their own 45-yard line. The Redskin drive stopped there and Baugh punted 55 yards to George Taliafero who returned eight to the New York 15-yard line. Spec Sanders punted to Frankie Spaniel who was downed on the Redskins' 36-yard line.

The Redskins got their first break of the game a moment later when Jack Russell blocked Baugh's fourth down punt, but Rob Goode recovered and ran 11 yards to the Redskins' 48-yard line. On second down, Baugh passed in the flat to Dudley on the Redskins' 48-yard line and Dudley threaded through the entire Yanks team for a touchdown. Dudley reversed his field twice. He added the extra point. Redskins led, 7-0.

SECOND QUARTER

On the second play of the quarter, Harry Gilmer passed 29 yards to Dudley who was downed on the Yanks 22-yard line. Rookie Halfback George Thomas fumbled on the next play and Tackle Martin Ruby recovered for the Yanks on their own 16-yard line. The Yanks make their first first down, a 23-yard pass from Ratterman to End Dan Edwards on the New York 39-yard line. The Yanks punted after Ratterman missed two passes. Sanders punted to Senz who returned 5 yards to the Redskins 15-yard line.

A little later Gilmer passed 50 yards to Hugh Taylor in the end zone for a touchdown, but it was called back and the Redskins pen-

Brooklyn 4½ Back

Philadelphia, Sept. 7 (AP).—A brilliant relief job by Ralph Branca helped the Brooklyn Dodgers nip the Philadelphia Phillies, 3-2, tonight for their third straight victory over the league leaders.

Branca replaced Starter Carl Erskine with the Dodgers leading by one run, a Philly runner on third and nobody out in the eighth.

He struck out sluggers Willie Jones and Del Ennis and forced Jack Mayo to foul out to third baseman Billy Cox.

The triumph lifted the Brooks to within four and a half games of the Phils.

Del Ennis accounted for all the losers' runs with a pair of homers, his twenty-ninth and thirtieth of the season as the Phils went down to their fifth straight defeat.

Moreno, Nats' Newest Cuban, Faces A's Tonight

Julio Moreno, the Nats' newest pitcher from Havana, will make his major league debut tonight against the A's. He won 15, lost only three in the Florida-International League.

He will be opposed by Joe Murray, A's rookie, who won 20 games in the same league this season.

A special starting time of 8 p. m. to enable the Athletics to catch a train has been set for the game.

Saddler 8-5 to Wrest Title From Pep in 3d Bout Tonight

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (AP).—Canny Willie Pep and Slasher Sandy Saddler, whose two stirring battles boosted the ring's "little guys" back to the big time, resume their featherweight title feuding in Yankee Stadium tomorrow night.

A crowd of 40,000 is expected to contribute a gross gate of $250,000.

Wee Willie regained his crown from the lanky Harlem Negro in that memorable Madison Square Garden meeting with one of the cleverest boxing exhibitions seen in years. Yet the champion probably will find himself the underdog again when he squares off against his younger rival at 9 p. m. (EST) for the 15-rounder.

Saddler is rated a 5-to-8 choice to win although the odds are liable to change when the professional betting money starts to pour in. There was some hefty wagering when the fight was made but the "action" slowed down considerably since.

The 24-year-old challenger is being made the favorite on the strength of the wrecking job he did on the 28-year-old Hartford cutie's face on February 11, 1949. Skinny Sandy sliced gashes over and under Pep's both eyes and several times had him on the verge of a knockout.

Sorrentino Puts on Riding Show With 5 Timonium Winners

Bill Bennings

AT TIMONIUM.

DEAR FOLKS:

The pressbox boys are still talking about the big Labor Day crowd here. It was variously estimated at from 15,000 to 17,000. However, this was not a record. I can't remember the year, but in the late 1930's there was a holiday gathering that completely circled the outside of the track, the first time and only time I've seen it. Marlboro, with its new grandstand and clubhouse, is being shined up for the opening of the meeting there next Wednesday. By the way, Racing Secretary John Turner, jr., will open the office to horsemen on Monday. Marlboro should draw better horses than usual. Many trainers will be there waiting for the September 30 opening of Bowie.—BILL.

High Note, $31.80, Is High Price

TIMONIUM, Sept. 7.—Jockey Mike Sorrentino, 21-year-old rider from St. Albans, N. Y., was the saddle star of today's program at this half mile course with five winners.

After the first six races, Sorrentino had won his five. He didn't have a chance to ride all six as he was without a mount in the second race won by Patsy Grant on Mrs. Jack Bosley 3d's Uncle Remus.

Sorrentino started his brilliant riding before 6012 fans by winning the opener with B. A. Hall sr's Wee Singer ($7.60) and climaxed his sparkling riding performance by taking the Governor's Day Purse with ease on Suzanna Farm's Killer Mac ($3.40).

Between those races, he captured the third with Goss Stryker's Anagazandra ($5.80) the fourth with Mrs. W. I. Jones' Cedar Brand ($3.80) and the fifth with J. A. Earnshaw's High Note which paid $31.80 for the longest price of the five winners.

In the Governor's Day Purse, a mile and a sixteenth jaunt for four-year-olds and upward, Sorrentino restrained Killer Mac for a half mile as Heaven Hill and Frank's Moose set the pace. At that point, Mike called on him for the speed and the gelding went to the lead with ease to register by six lengths over Frank's Moose with Heaven Hill in third in the field of seven. Killer Mac was timed in 1:50 3/5 on a fast track, a fifth of a second off the track record held by Rough Cloud.

Virginia Club Defends President's Cup Rowing Title Sunday

Bloodworm Lures

Spot Crowd Blues Off Small Hooks

By Ralph Murdock

THE BLUES still occupy the spotlight in the area. Nevertheless, the rowboat fishermen are having a picnic with the spot.

Mu-dock

These ravenous feeders are being taken in enormous quanities from Cornfield Harbor in the lower Potomac River up to Bloody Point Light off Kent Island. Small hooks and a dozen bloodworms will nab a hundred.

Weekend Suggestions:

TROUT—We pick the Cornfield Harbor area in the lower Potomac for consistency. Peeler crab is the necessary morsel for bait.

BLUEFISH — Before the "Nor'easter," good catches prevailed between Old Cedar Point Lighthouse and Point-No-Point, off the Cedar Point Naval Base. No. 3 Red-head Lusby's and No. 1 Nungesser lures are effective.

ROCKFISH—The big ones are at Solomon's Island off Point Patience if you can afford to float six dozen soft shell crabs to the huskies. Night is the time for the sport.

SPOT—Sharp's Light area on the Eastern Side of the Bay and Holland Point on the Western side. Bloodworm is a positive bait.

An even dozen anglers fishing with Capt. Taft Tippett out of St. Jerome Creek had little space left on their boat after catching 108 trout, nearly 500 spot and 44 blues. It was an all-day trip—12 dozen bloodworms, 48 pillers and cut spot was used.

The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Winstead, Paul and Leroy Sinoms, Lee Eitnier, Ray and Jeane Hughes (the latter two from Charlottesville, Va.), Charles Hughes, Alice Hamilton, Daisy Rauebsam, Frank Voehl and 14-year-old Pat Beck of Baltimore, Md.

Here's a two-day catch made off the Flagpond just below Long Beach harbor on the Chesapeake Bay where the Daniel Quigleys have a summer home. The anglers were Mr. and Mrs. Quigley and John Rooney and his wife, Doloris.

The four were fishing from an outboard motor boat between two pound nets. The catch—24 trout, all above the one-pound mark, more than 100 spot and 40 black wills.

Jaycees Give Griff Plaque

The Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday presented Nats' President Clark Griffith with a plaque, thanking him for contributing the ball park for the All-America Amateur Baseball Association tournament September 13-17.

Griffith addressed the Jaycees, sponsors of the tourney, at a luncheon at the Burlington Hotel, and apologized for the absence of Connie Mack, A's manager-president.

"Mr. Mack called me this morning and said he wasn't feeling up to sorts," said Griffith, and he added as an afterthought, "our 3-0 victory over them last night must have had something to do with his illness."

Griffith encouraged the 225 Jaycees to pitch in and sell tickets for the sandlot tourney. The lineup of teams: Heurich and another team from Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Elkton, Md., Holyoke and Springfield, Mass., Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, Wilkes-Barre and Allentown, Pa., New York and Brooklyn, Zanesville, Ohio, Waterbury, Conn., and Birmingham, Ala.

Pa. Contributes 25 to Maryland Football Squad

The State of Maryland in general, and the University of Maryland football team in particular, owe a lot to their neighbors north of the Mason-Dixon line.

The Terps' 1950 grid roster reads like a roll call of a Pennsylvania National Guard unit. No less than 37 percent, or 25 of the 67-squad members, call the Keystone State home.

Maryland, home of the majority of the university's student body, can claim only 15 gridders, followed by New York and New Jersey, with eight and six, respectively.

Dominion, Potomac in Fours, Eights

By Happy Walker

THE PRESIDENT'S CUP rowing regatta Sunday is expected to draw capacity riverside throngs.

Virginia Boat Club of Richmond will be back to defend the title it won last year. It will encounter top-grade opposition. Entries already have been received from New York A. C., and the always formidable Philadelphia delegation, including Penn A. C., Malta, Bachelors Barge, Undine and Vesper.

Old Dominion Boat Club and Potomac Boat Club, local participants, will compete in senior singles, fours and eights and junior singles and doubles, intermediate singles and doubles.

The Potomac lads will be trying hard to erase their mediocre showing in the Middle States championship last week.

Rowing Chairman George Hernan has scheduled the races for 1 p. m. There will be ample vantage points for spectators, both banks of the river affording choice free spots.

COMMODORE JACK HYDE will preside at the first Fall Executive Committee meeting of the Capital Power Boat Association at the Burlington Hotel tonight at 8 p. m.

The fledgling race group, with three informal regattas to their credit so far during their freshman year, will dissuss future race and activity dates.

AREA SAILING LEGION will divide their attention between two banner sailing regattas over tomorrow and Sunday at Baltimore and Fishing Bay, Va.

Most of Washington's blue water skippers will make the short haul to the Maryland Yacht Club double header sailing classic, which in the last several years, has grown by leaps and bounds. Two races will be staged tomorrow and one Sunday for the popular small classes as well as the larger cruising, Delta and Racing classes.

Terps' Palmer, Rubach Called To Active Duty

The University of Maryland's hopes for a fourth straight undefeated cross country and outdoor track season goes marching away today with the 163d Military Police Battalion of the District's National Guard.

Bob Palmer, undefeated in three years of cross country competition, and Carl Rubach, holder of the school's 120-yard high hurdles record, were called to active duty with the unit leaving today.

Winner of 22 consecutive races, including three Southern Conference crowns, Palmer is considered by Coach im Kehoe as "one of the best cross country men in the country."

Firemen Hand Police 1st City Series Loss

The Fire Department handed the Police Department its first defeat in the city sandlot series, 9-3, yesterday on the Ellipse. The victors have won two games and lost one and the Police have a 3-1 mark.

Dutch Schaeffer allowed the Police only three hits. Bill Vaughn rapped out two singles and a double and Jerry Shine had two singles and a triple to pace the Firemen's attack.

In today's game at 4:30 p. m. on the South Ellipse, the Heurich Brewers meet the Police.

Giants Beat Rams, 24-14; Glenn Davis Slugs Fan

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (AP).—Forrest Griffith, rookie back from the University of Kansas, paced the New York Giants with a pair of touchdowns in the fourth quarter tonight that meant a 24 to 14 victory over the Las Angeles Rams in a professional football exhibition.

Most of the 37,355, spectators had come to see Glenn Davis, former Army star. And "Mr. Outside" gave them their money's worth with a 4-yard scoring blast midway in the first period.

But Davis' most exciting exploit came after the final gun when he chased and slugged a fan who had jumped on to the field and swiped his helmet.

Score by periods:

Los Angeles	7	0	7	0—14
New York	0	10	0	14—24

Los Angeles: Touchdowns—Davis, Fears. Extra points—Waterfield (2).
New York: Touchdowns—Griffith (2), Poole. Extra points—Poole (3). Field goal—Poole.

Redskins Whip Yankees, 24-7

REDSKINS—from Pg. 21

alized 15 yards for holding. Baugh kicked to Taliaferro who returned 9 yards to the Yanks 20-yard line.

Ratterman completed two passes, to Edwards and Art Weiner to the Redskins 41-yard line. It was the first time the Yanks had crossed midfield.

Hall Haynes intercepted a Ratterman pass in the flat and returned it 36 yards to the New York 38-yard line. Gilmer completed a 15-yard pass to Goodnight. Gilmer's pass to Taylor to the end zone was no good, but the Yanks were detected interfering and the Redskins got the ball on the 1-yard line. Gilmer went over on a quarterback sneak for the score. Dudley added the extra point and the Redskins led, 14-0.

Two minutes before the half, Ratterman passed 17 yards to Taliaferro who raced to the Redskins' 8-yard line where Howie Livingston brought him down. Taliaferro fumbled and Spaniel recovered for the Redskins on the Washington 8-yard line to wipe out the 60-yard New York advance. Two plays later the first half ended with Washington leading, 14-0.

THIRD QUARTER

The third quarter was only a minute old when the Redskins increased their lead to 17-0. Guard John Badaczewski recovered Toth's fumble on New York's 39-yard line. On fourth down, Dudley, with Baugh holding, booted a perfect 44-yard field goal.

Midway in the quarter, Pete Stout intercepted Johnny Rauch's pass on the Yanks 22, fumbled it, but Bob Goode recovered for the Redskins on the New York 18-yard line. Baugh passed to Fullback Chuck Drazenovich, Penn State rookie, on the 3-yard line and Drazenovich went over for a touchdown. Dudley again converted and the Redskins led, 24 to 0.

FOURTH QUARTER

The teams spent the next few minutes exchanging punts.

A few minutes later the ball slipped out of Baugh's hands as he was back to punt and Art Weiner of North Carolina recovered for the Yanks on the 34-yard line. Spilled for a 12-yard loss on his first attempt to pass, Quarterback Rauch made the next one good, a 46-yarder to End Bob Mann, who got behind Joe Bartos, Redskins' safety man, and caught the ball on the run on the 2-yard line for the first New York score. Rauch added the extra point. The Redskins led, 24-7.

MEN

Who have contributed most to our high standards of living have been salesmen.

Washington NEEDS intelligent salesmen.

Washington is the best market in the country.

Intelligent salesmen have little competition here. They are so few.

We have a product recommended by the best authorities in the country. It makes everything it replaces OBSOLETE.

The market is here—the product is here.

Under our guidance you will learn salesmanship the only way by doing.

We have men who make more money in their spare time than their 40-hour job pays, and when you learn to be a good salesman it's a full time job.

If you have a car, and are a permanent resident, come to see me at 7 P.M. sharp, Friday, September 8.

Store Official Explains Rise In Meat Cost

By The Associated Press

A chain store executive said yesterday that consumer resistance played a part in meat price changes last July.

J. Arnold Anderson, price maker for Safeway Stores here, told a Senate Agriculture subcommittee, however, that prices of sirloin and porterhouse cuts never went above a "very reasonable level" in view of what the company paid for beef carcasses.

The testimony was given as the subcommittee, headed by Senator Gillette (D., Iowa), opened hearings on the spread of meat prices between producers and consumers.

Gillette centered his attention on a Safeway chart which showed that during July the retail price of sirloin steak in Washington dropped from about $1 a pound at the outset of the month to 88 cents; then rose to $1.10, dropped again to around 98 cents, and then ended the month at nearly $1.10.

While this occurred, the prices for beef on the hoof in Chicago and the prices paid by Safeway for carcasses remained practically static, or had little variation, Gillette said.

Resistance Developed

Anderson explained that consumer resistance developed at the higher prices, and that Safeway was required to cut prices in order to move beef loins that were being stacked up in its warehouse.

He said that as of July 13, the average retail price for an entire beef carcass was 54.5 cents a pound. At the same time, the cost to Safeway was about 50 cents, according to the chart.

J. C. Zink, Philadelphia, director of meats for the Atlantic division of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., denied that any attempt was made to set a high meat base in anticipation of Government price controls.

Paul Hadlick, subcommittee counsel, said charts on prices which were before the committee indicated an attempt to set a high base "in case controls are put on."

He was asked by committee counsel to explain why retail round steak prices of the company increased from 79 cents a pound in January and February to $1.11 while carcasses were increasing from 42 cents to 50½ cents.

Zink replied there had been a progressive increase in price of meat to the company during that period.

Bookkeeper Stole $175,000, Machinists' Union Charges

The International Association of Machinists charged yesterday in a District Court suit that Richard G. Richardson, 27, its former bookkeeper, stole more than $175,000 during the past three years.

The figure is double that given out after Richardson, of 9 Fort Hunt rd., Alexandria was arrested and charged with the embezzlement. He is now awaiting District Court action.

The civil suit, filed through Attorney Thomas M. Raysor, demands judgment for the $175,000 and seeks an injunction to prevent those holding any of the money from disposing of it.

Earlier this week, the union filed a token suit for $5400 from Richardson and said that another action would be brought as soon as a full audit was made.

The new suit was worded in a way to recover money Richardson dissipated by betting with horse-race bookies here. Also, the language might be used to recover the value of furnishings he bought for the $50,000 house he rents for $250 a month.

At the time of his arrest, August 24, Richardson was earning $55 a week and supplementing this with $2700 weekly through his manipulations of union payroll adding-machine tapes, according to the union.

He admitted that he had psent a "considerable amount" on the horses. Also, he said that he had bought a new Cadillac for his wife and had four servants.

He was caught last month when a made an "honest" $8.18 mistake, according to police. In the investigation of this error, the large-scale swindle was found, they said.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

More Than 6000 Jobs Are Asked for New Social Security Law

Upwards of 6000 new Federal jobs will be set up to carry out the new and expanded Social Security law. The Senate Appropriations Committee is now considering the President's request for funds to hire the new workers.

Social Security would get the bulk of the new workers, about 4600 in all. Its Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance is seeking to use an additional $17,750,000 from its trust fund for its expanded operations.

The bureau, which has headquarters in Baltimore, is planning to hire 1000 employes immediately, and to add 3300 others for a total of 4300 before the end of the present fiscal year next June 30. Several hundred of the new employes would be hired at the Baltimore headquarters. The remainder will be scattered among the bureau's 500 field offices the country-over. All the jobs will be in the low-salary bracket.

In addition, between 250 and 300 new employes would be hired at the Social Security Administration headquarters here to administer the new provision in the act.

The Internal Revenue Bureau, charged with collecting Social Security taxes from the millions of additional persons to be covered by the system, is seeking more than 1000 new employes for the added work. Furthermore, Treasury's Bureau of Accounts, Secret Service, and its Treasurer's office all are slated for small staff expansions because of added duties under the Social Security law.

Incidentally, the bill to authorize the Bureau of Old-Age & Survivor Insurance to use its funds to build its own building has been stymied in a Senate committee.

PERSONNEL SHIFT: A new move has been made in the Senate to transfer employes from nondefense to defense work.

A resolution, sponsored jointly by Senators Hendrickson (R., N. J.) and Wherry (R., Nebr.), would direct the Budget Bureau to determine how many employes each agency should have during this fiscal year and to transfer surplus employes from nondefense to defense work. Hendrickson told the Senate:

"We must mobilize the programs of Government so that they will be completely free of such things as political patronage, payroll padding and expediency based upon purely political considerations . . . Efforts first should be made to find, through our great Civil Service system, where transfers can be made with advantage both to the Government and to the employe. . ."

Supporters Of Manager Plan Explain Position

Fairfax Women Voters League Replies to Report Of Study Commission

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Fairfax County's League of Women Voters yesterday explained why it considers the county manager form of government more advantageous to the county than the county executive system.

It was a statement prepared as a reply to the recent report of a 21-member government study commission. The commission, named by the present county supervisors, urged adoption of the county executive plan in a public referendum to be held next November 7. The county now has the executive secretary system.

The league expressed preference for the county-wide election of the board of supervisors, as required under the county manager plan. It also contended the system would relieve the supervisors of "time-consuming" administrative duties.

Unequal Representation?

Under the county executive system, providing for election of the six supervisors by voters within their respective districts, half of the board's membership would be elected by 17 percent of the voters, the league contended. This would stem from the fact that three of the magisterial districts are agricultural and sparsely settled, while the other three are in a heavily-populated urban area that holds 83 percent of the total population.

Under the county manager plan, supervisors still would be elected from districts, but all voters in the county would participate in their selection.

"The study commission's position that the smaller number of people in the rural areas should have as large a voice in the selection of supervisors as the larger number in suburban areas is not merely over-simple, but preposterous," the statement said. "Only county manager form will make one person's vote as good as the next person's in Fairfax County."

Manager's Powers

Referring to the powers of the supervisors under the two plans, the league said the county manager plan would relieve the supervisors of "the pressure of office seekers" because all appointments would be made by the manager. It also would relieve them of time-consuming discussions about the relative merits of applicants and free them for discussions of more urgent problems facing the county, the league contended.

The league said a county manager would have supreme power in making appointments, while under the county executive form, the supervisors would control appointments through their power to confirm the administrator's nominees.

Hails Vote for Reform

While renewing its support of the manager plan, the league said it was "encouraged by the unanimous opinion of the commission that there should be a change in our government." It added, however, "we found some things in the report with which we cannot agree."

Mrs. Edward Macy, president of the league, said the group would continue its campaign for the county manager plan with an extensive information program, designed to acquaint county voters with the merits of the two systems.

Earlier, the Committee for Good Government in Fairfax County termed the commission's recommendation of the county executive plan "a half-way approach to efficient and democratic government." It predicted an overwhelming victory for the county manager plan.

At the same time, the committee hailed the commission's recognition of the need for a change in government as "a major turning point in the county's history."

Opposition 'Desperate'

"The commission, which originally represented the forces which have fought all improvements, now votes unanimously in support of our contention—the critical need and popular demand for a fundamental change in the government form," the good government committee said

"We recognize that the county executive form recommended by the commission would provide less of good government than the people of Fairfax County deserve and need," the statement said. "It represents a half-way step toward the efficient and democratic government that will be provided by the county manager plan.

"We recognize, too," the committee continued, "the real reason why the forces who until now have opposed any change in the present, miserably inadequate form are now rushing to admit the need for a change. It must be apparent to all who are familar with conditions that most of those who now are calling for the county executive form are doing so in a desperate attempt to stop the good government movement at the halfway mark."

A spokesman for the committee said yesterday it was planning a point-by-point analysis of the two forms of government, to be used to convince voters of the advantages of the manager plan.

Purse, Wallet Found, Given Back in Hour

Twice a finder but not a keeper within an hour's time was Miss Laura Penland, claims examiner in the Navy Department's Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Wednesday night.

At 7:15 p. m., while in Union Station, she found a woman's handbag in the ladies' room. Recalling that a young woman, with a crying baby, had just left the spot, she hurried into the main waiting room, where she soon traced the woman through the child's cries and returned the purse.

After seeing off a friend, Miss Penland left the station. On her way to her home at Arlington Village she stopped in a drugstore on Columbia Pike to make a telephone call.

It was just 8:15 p. m., when she glanced at the floor of the telephone booth and spied a man's wallet. It contained $13 in cash but no identification. Miss Penland turned it over to the drugstore manager.

Employed at the Navy Department for nine years, Miss Penland came here from Asheville, N. C. The only other thing she ever recalls finding, she said yesterday, was a coin purse, containing about 65 cents, about 10 years ago in Asheville.

Two Killed When 'Cycle Hits Curbing

Young Army Veteran, Woman Companion Victims of Crash At Sousa Bridge

District Traffic Toll:
1950 deaths to date 47
1949 deaths to date 41
Total 1949 death toll 71

A young Army veteran and a woman companion were fatally injured when their motorcycle struck a curb at Sousa Bridge at 3:20 a. m. yesterday and sailed an estimated 110 feet through the air.

Mr. Gradwell

Both died at Casualty Hospital. Mrs. Joanne L. Jefferson, 18, of 635 G st. se., died a half hour after the accident and her companion, Henry H. Gradwell, 22, of 428½ 13th st. ne., was pronounced dead at 5:40 a. m.

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, issued certificates of accidental death.

Police said the motorcycle, operated by Gradwell, apparently approached the bridge on Pennsylvania ave. at a speed of between 40 and 50 miles an hour.

They said it appeared that Gradwell tried to turn into the curving cloverleaf entrance to Fairlawn Park but struck the curb. Both riders were thrown about 60 feet through the air and the motorcycle soared and skidded another 50 feet.

Gradwell's mother, Mrs. Frances A. Gradwell, was at the hospital when he died. She said he had been a motorcycle fan but had sold his machine recently and promised her he would never ride them again. Wednesday night, however, he had borrowed one from his brother Thomas, she said.

A native of Washington, Gradwell attended Anacostia High School and Chamberlain Vocational School. He was in the Air Force from 1946 to 1949 and served overseas.

He will be given a military burial in Arlington Cemetery at 11 a. m. Monday. In addition to hs mother and brother, he is survived by a half-brother, Philip E. Gradwell of Falls Church, Va., and a half-sister, Mrs. Grace Compton of Washington.

According to police, Mrs. Jefferson, Gradwell's companion, lived alone in a rooming house, had no known relatives here and came to Washington about a year ago from her home in Carlsbad, N. M. In her effects, police said, were letters indicating her father and stepmother, Charles and Mary Carroll, live now in Leonardtown, Md.

Billy Stone, 8, a Brave Boy, Also Proves a Real Fisherman

Eight-year-old Billy Stone is not only a brave little boy, but a real fisherman at heart.

As he clung to an overturned rowboat with other members of a fishing party in the Chesapeake Bay Wednesday, Billy remained quiet and unafraid.

The one thing that really bothered him was the disappearance of the spot he caught (it was the biggest catch of the trip) when the boat capsized. That made him a very disappointed little boy, his mother said yesterday.

Billy was kept afloat by his dad, William M. Stone, 33, of 1310 Park rd. nw., for nearly three hours, while another member of the party, George R. Houston, 32, of 6412 Madawaska rd., Glen Echo Heights, Md., swam two miles to shore for help.

Yesterday, Houston, assistant librarian at the Supreme Court, modestly explained at his home:

"No, I'm not much of a swimmer. I'm just lucky, I guess. I don't know just why I decided to swim in to shore and I'm certainly not a hero."

He and another friend, Edward Fairfax, 45, of Philadelphia, were visiting the Stones at their cottage in North Beach Park, Md., for the day, when the three men and Billy decided on the fishing trip. The near-tragedy came when the 15-foot boat overturned after shipping too much water.

As it went over, Stone managed to get an old life preserver around Billy, which helped keep the boy afloat until it became waterlogged.

Four boats went quickly to the rescue of Billy, his father and Fairfax, after Houston reached shore. Billy and Fairfax spent the night in Prince Frederick Hospital. All four returned yesterday, still stiff and sore and very tired but not too much the worse for wear.

Not so Billy's mother, who heard about the capsizing when Houston first got to shore and had to wait frantically on the pier for an hour and a half before she knew the boats had successfully rescued the trio.

"There'll be no more trips unless the boat is equipped with plenty of good life preservers," she remarked yesterday. "In fact, even then there may be no other trips at all. I heard the men say last night that from now on they'll get their fish at the fish market."

Three Congressional Contests Certain in Virginia Election

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 7, (AP).—Congressional contests in the November 7 general election were certain today in three Virginia districts.

Certifications filed with Levin Nock Davis, secretary of the State Board of Elections, have assured contests in the First, Seventh and Eighth districts, with a three-way race the prospect in the First.

Democratic Representative Edward J. Robeson, jr., of Newport News, faces the challenge in the First of Republican Nile Straughan, of Fredericksburg, and independent Stanley Garner, of Newport News.

In the Seventh, it will be Democratic Congressman Burr P. Harrison, of Winchester, against former Republican Representative Jacob A. Garber, of Harrisonburg. And the Eighth's race will pit the 1948 opponents against each other — Democratic Incumbent Howard W. Smith and Republican Tyrrell Krum.

George C. Sutherland, 64-year-old Grundy attorney, has been nominated by Ninth District Republicans to run against Democratic Representative Thomas B. Fugate. But he had not been certified to the State board of elections as late as yesterday, Secretary Davis revealed.

Glenn C. Williams, Ninth District Republican chairman, said today he mailed a certification of Sutherland's nomination to the board this morning after learning it previously had not been filed. The deadline for certification is Friday.

D. C. Divorce Action Names Corespondent

James Douglas Freeman, employe of The Washington Post, was named corespondent yesterday in a divorce suit filed in District Court.

The suit was brought by Chief Petty Officer William T. Castleberry, jr., of the Naval Gun Factory, against Mrs. Doris Isabelle Castleberry, of South Charleston, W. Va. They married in 1944 and have a son, born in 1946.

Woman Who Won Fight With Blindness Tells of Her Ordeal in Her Own World

MRS. MARGARET BROADLEY READS TO DAUGHTERS, BARBARA AND DEBORAH

The Washington Post

Mrs. Margaret E. Broadley has a cauliflower ear. But she also has her sight.

In the fight to keep from going blind, Mrs. Broadley, wife of a Government official, had to lie with sandbags against her head to keep it still, thus accounting for the cauliflower ear.

For weeks she could not wash her teeth or comb her hair. She had to keep looking straight ahead. She was not even allowed to cry.

But she lived in "a fantastic world" with "snow-capped mountains that made the Alps seem like dirty foothills."

Mrs. Broadley's story is told in "Escape From Blindness" in the issue of Life Magazine on the stands today. She lives on West Saul rd. in Kensington, Md. Mrs. Broadley is the author of "Square Pegs in Round Holes" and "Know Your Real Ability."

"One Saturday morning almost two years ago I found myself going blind," Mrs. Broadley relates.

Within five hours she was on her way to Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, where her condition was diagnosed as a "detached retina"—a tiny rip in the retina that had separated it from the eye wall.

She was told she must have an operation, else "I would lose the sight of my left eye and, as in other cases, the same thing could happen to my right eye, resulting in total blindness."

Both before and after the operation the main thing was to lie perfectly still so as not to hurt the eye. One of the most difficult aspects of this, relates Mrs. Broadley, was to control thinking itself.

"I had to avoid any thought that made me emotionally upset in any way. The woman's natural luxury of a good cry was denied me. I found I had to rule myself with an iron hand, for I am naturally emotional. I worked out a system of thinking—by replacing thoughts with pleasant ones before the unpleasant thought gets a chance to develop. It really works."

It was after the operation that the world of fantasy opened up.

Behind a black mask over her eyes ". . . rose real scenes, set in a new world—scenes so breathtakingly lovely that for a moment I actually wondered if I had passed on during the operation, that this was another world.

"A vast dome greater than the heavens was before me. The scenes within it shifted about. I remember especially one of snow-capped mountains that in comparison made the Alps seem like dirty foothills. There were autumn pictures alive and blazing with colors I am sure no one else ever has seen. . . . There were Indians sitting in a circle around a campfire. I knew I was not delirious for I had carried on a conversation with the nurse and I had listened to the radio. . . ."

Mrs. Broadley discovered she was lucky. Some persons after this operation, she was told, saw horrible things. "One had seen black cats the size of horses; before the nurses could stop him he tried to climb the bathroom pipes to escape."

Mrs. Broadley went home on October 31, 1948. For weeks, though, she had to wear pin-point glasses by day—left side completely blacked out, and in the right side the barest pin prick in the solid black glass—and the mask by night.

And at Christmas she was given a special present. "I was allowed to wear my old glasses, leave off the mask at night and move my head from side to side to sleep. As a special treat, my hair was washed in the bathtub."

Today, two years later, Mrs. Broadley still has to be very careful. She can't do heavy lifting, or "any real bending over." But she can get about alone today—which she couldn't for a long time.

She is a happy woman for her "escape from blindness."

D. C. Boxer Perry Again Under Arrest

Former District middleweight boxing champion, Aaron Perry, 24, free under bond on one robbery charge, was re-arrested yesterday and charged with holding up a dice game early Tuesday morning.

Perry and Charles Vincent Turner, 23, of 2213 12th pl. ne., were identified as the robbers by dice players who were held up at Red's Social Club, 1354 Wallach pl., nw.

Ten patrons told police that Turner, with a .32 caliber pistol, and Perry, with a knife, forced them to surrender more than $200.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence set $10,000 bond for each man. Both were indicted July 24 for housebreaking and robbery in connection with the July 2 holdup of store owner Maurice K. Lewis, 4805 Georgia ave. nw.

Lawrence set $10,000 for each in that case, but the bond was reduced to $2500 in Municipal Court, and each man made that lower bond. They are awaiting trial.

Perry, who lives at 1635 Gales st. ne., and Turner were identified in a lineup at police headquarters yesterday.

According to police, they used membership cards to enter the club, then lined up the patrons against a wall.

Perry has been almost as active with the law as in the ring. He owes the Government more than $10,000 in unpaid income taxes. He was in trouble with Fort Meade authorities during World War II. In March, 1949, he was convicted of assault.

Federal Employe Found Dead in Car; Believed Suicide

The body of a 30-year-old Government employe, a .22-caliber bullet wound in his head, was found in the back seat of an automobile yesterday, off Largo rd., 4 miles north of Marlboro, Md.

Police withheld identification, but at the Ritchie Bros. funeral home, the body was identified as that of Richard Morien, 1424 Trinidad ave. se.

Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County coroner, told reporters he would issue a certificate of suicide.

The body was found near the Western Branch by Lawrence McQuade, Dodge Park, Md., as he went to wash his car in the creek.

Police said they found a rifle and a penciled note, addressed "Dear Folks," that indicated Morien had been in poor health.

Sasscer Lauds Party Slate At County Democratic Rally

The weakness of many nations following World War II can be traced to the inability of any political party to assume dominance, Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), told some 250 persons last night at the Branchville firehouse.

Sasscer and 21 members of the party organization's county primary slate appeared at a rally sponsored by the Twenty-first District Democratic Club of Prince Georges County.

Because of the large number of splinter parties in these postwar nations, responsibility could not be centered in any one party, Sasscer said.

He urged his listeners to support the organization's slate in the September 18 primaries, asserting that it is as strong as any he could remember in the county's history.

The practice of selecting slates of candidates by party organization is desirable, he said, because it affords strength through organization and coordination. He added that the present slate has been indorsed by more than 8000 party members.

The other principal speaker, Delegate Leroy Pumphrey, contended it is futile to nominate primary candidates running in opposition to the organization slate.

For example, he explained, the county delegation to the General Assembly casts its votes as a unit, determined by the will of the majority of its members.

"And what can any opposition candidate promise to accomplish under that system—if one or two should slip in?" he asked

Leland G. Worthington, president of the club, presided, and the candidates were introduced by State Senator L. Harold Sothoron, campaign chairman.

Mahoney Says Barn Houses Mental Cases

BALTIMORE, Sept. 7, (AP).—George P. Mahoney declared tonight that patients at "crowded Spring Grove State Mental Hospital are sleeping in a burned and charred barn."

The candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor contended in a statement that such a condition exists "while Governor Lane is going around the state trying to convince the voters that he has not neglected" the state mental hospitals.

Mahoney said Baltimore County firemen "had reported the incident to fire authorities and asked its correction, pointing out that combustible materials stored in this barn were a danger to the lives of the patients."

Meanwhile, Delegate J. Raymond Buffington, jr. (D., Balto., 3d), denied an earlier charge by Lane that he is serving as Mahoney's adviser on mental hospitals. Mahoney issued such a denial several days ago.

Buffington recently went to the Eastern Shore State Hospital with a photographer and returned with some pictures that Mahoney used to support charges of what he termed bad conditions at the institution.

Lane said the pictures and information were distorted. He said Buffington had proposed a budget reduction in 1947, which, if adopted, would have meant that the diets of mental and tuberculosis hospital patients would have been reduced "to a starvation level."

Larrabee Sees Self As Democrats' Choice

BALTIMORE, Sept. 7, (AP).—Herbert William Larrabee said today that unless he gets the Democratic gubernatorial nomination "a Republican will be elected governor in November."

Former Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin, of Baltimore, is the unopposed candidate for the Republican nomination.

Larrabee, a retired Naval officer, said in a statement that thousands of voters "are disgusted with the mud-slinging campaign" between George P. Mahoney and Governor Lane, leading candidates for the Democratic nomination.

He said that on a tour of the Eastern Shore he was "told by many, many Democrats that if either Mahoney or Lane is nominated, they will vote for the Republican in the general election."

"They speak of the Mahoney and Lane campaigns as childish—like children playing marbles behind the school house. The people are losing respect for the principles of the party."

Prince Georges Firemen to Open Convention

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) will be the principal speaker at tonight's opening of the Prince Georges County Voluntary Firemen's Association two-day convention in the auditorium of Frederick Sasscer High School, Marlboro.

A Ladies Auxiliary meeting, to be held in the gymnasium of the high school, will be addressed by Leroy Pumphrey, majority leader of the Maryland House of Delegates. Both sessions are at 8 p. m.

Saturday's program lists a parade at 11 a. m. and various contests between departments during the afternoon from 1:30 p. m.

At the evening session, the association will elect officers for next year. Frank Nymark of Mount Rainier is the retiring president.

Case Load Of Juvenile Court Jumps 11.7 Percent

Judge Cockrill Reports Backlog Not Appreciable; Reorganizing Staff

A record juvenile case load for the fiscal year 1950 was reported yesterday by Juvenile Court Judge Edith H. Cockrill.

In her first annual report to the District Commissioners, Judge Cockrill, who took the bench last August, said 3836 cases were handled during the year, compared to 3435 the preceding year, a jump of 11.7 percent.

There were increases both in the juvenile delinquency and dependency load. Delinquency complaints rose 10.3 percent, from 3040 in 1949 to 3374 in 1950. Dependency complaints went up from 395 to 462.

Judge Cockrill said the volume of court work "substantially increased," but there was now "no appreciable backlog of cases."

Reorganizing Court

Miss Cockrill disclosed that she is reorganizing the court "so that it may better serve the community." For one thing, she said, the intake section is being enlarged to relieve the juvenile section of the responsibility for initial studies and evaluations.

This will permit the juvenile section to "concentrate and operate more effectively in the supervision of juvenile probationers."

Judge Cockrill said that while most of the shifts were being made with present personnel, she was asking for one additional case work supervisor in her current budget request.

She deplored the "failure to receive any of the appropriations requested" for a statistical staff which is needed, she said, by both court and community "in evaluting their work and in directing their further efforts toward more effectively dealing with the problems of juvenile delinquency."

Fewer Adult Cases

Judge Cockrill said that while the juvenile case load increased, the adult cases dropped 13.2 percent, from 3261 in 1949 to 2831 in 1950.

The court's adult section is responsible for supervision of persons placed on probation for nonsupport and of those required under the bastardy law to support illegitimate children. Judge Cockrill reported a "slight increase" in bastardy cases.

The report gave no statistics on commitments to the National Training School for Boys. Of the total case load, 1277 delinquency complaints went to court for action, and 2110 complaints were adjusted without court action. Complaints numbered 3836.

Last year, 1194 delinquency complaints went to court and 1857 were adjusted without court action, out of a total of 3435 complaints.

There were 3292 adult complaint cases, with 1009 calling for court action and 2283 adjusted out of court.

Boy, 14, Badly Hurt In 70-Foot Fall Through Skylight

A 14-year-old boy fell 70 feet through an open skylight atop the auditorium of the new Hyattsville (Md.) High School last night and was critically injured.

Victim of the fall was David Luehrman of 2 College Heights dr., College Heights, Md., a Hyattsville High School student.

Police said young Luehrman and several other boys were playing on top of the building now under construction on Colesville rd. He stepped through a space intended for a skylight but now only covered with tar paper. He plunged to the cement floor of the auditorium.

The boy was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, by the Bladensburg rescue squad.

Parochial Schools Reopen for 27,500

An estimated 27,500 parochial students—1700 more than last year—attended Washington Archdiocese schools yesterday for a half-day opening session. Another half-day session will be held today and the regular full-day program will begin Monday.

The Very Rev. Msgr. John S. Spence, director of education of the archdiocese, said the largest part of the increase is probably in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties. Final figures will not be known until early next week, he said.

The program for the classes yesterday included assignment to rooms, issuance of books and outlining of the course and school regulations.

On Wednesday, the 1000 teachers in the archdiocese schools attended a mass celebrated by Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle of Washington. The teachers are in elementary and high schools in Washington and the Maryland counties of Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert and St. Marys.

Has 5 Children

Gallaudet Professor Is Triplet Sire

Professor and Mrs. Francis C. Higgins are introducing three new bouncing boys, born within a few minutes last Friday at Sibley Hospital.

The triplets are Earl, Paul and Carl, weighing in at 6 pounds 9 ounces, 5 pounds 9 ounces and 7 pounds 8½ ounces, respectively. They were born three minutes apart.

The proud parents, who live at 8 Kendall Green ne., have two other children, Bonnie, 7, and Larry, who is 5 today. Professor Higgins has been associated with Gallaudet College since 1947 and is an assistant professor of chemistry.

The trio did not come as a surprise. X-rays several months ago showed that Mrs. Higgins was going to have triplets. Three little cribs and other baby equipment are waiting in the nursery at home, until Mrs. Higgins and the three sons return, possibly at the beginning of next week.

Both Professor Higgins and his wife are graduates of Gallaudet College. They met in Kentucky, where both were teaching in a school for the deaf at Danville.

WQQW in Red, Asks Authority To Reorganize

WQQW, the "good music" radio station here, yesterday admitted it was in financial straits and asked District Court to allow it to reorganize.

In acknowledging that its cash register was not making good music, the company denied this was due to mismanagement or inefficiency. Blame was put on slow payments for advertising and a summer slack season.

Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court set October 5 for the first reorganization hearing. In the meantime WQQW will continue operating with "only the finest music for 17 hours a day," according to its general manager, M. Robert Rogers.

At the present time, according to the court petition, WQQW owes its creditors $111,000 and has assets with a fair value of $138,000. But the complete value of its assets could not be realized by a quick sale at this time, the petition states.

The court action was taken after creditors failed to agree on a suggested reorganization plan, according to WQQW Attorneys Monroe Oppenheimer and Samuel Greenbaum.

On June 7, the Federal Communications Commission, in considering an FM-license application of the station, requested that it adjust its financial structure toward reducing its mortgage indebtedness.

Prince William Board Votes For Bond Issue

MANASSAS, Va., Sept. 7 (Spl.). The Prince William County Board of Supervisors today adopted, by a 3-2 vote, a resolution asking the Circuit Court to call a referendum on a $2,400,000 school construction bond issue.

The County School Board took similar action unanimously yesterday.

If the resolutions are now approved by the court, the bond issue would be floated in lieu of pending county applications to the State literary fund.

Board of Supervisors Chairman J. Murray Taylor, Coles District, refrained from voting on the bond issue.

Supervisors voting for the resolution were: J. Carl Kincheloe, Manassas District; Jack Fick, Dumfries District, and R. S. Hall, Occoquan District.

Special Events Honor Lane At State Fair

TIMONIUM, Md., Sept. 7. (AP)—Governor Lane got a miniature gold-plated tractor today when he visited the Timonium State Fair.

It was Governor's Day at the fair, one of the traditions of the 69-year-old institution. About 11,000 exhibitors and spectators were on the grounds for the event. It was the ninth day of the fair, which continues through Saturday.

The little tractor was presented to the Governor by a farm implement company, along with a citation for the interest he has taken in soil conservation work.

Lane took the occasion to reiterate a promise he made several days ago: He will sponsor and support legislation in the General Assembly for the transfer of Timonium Race Track rights to the group which is trying to buy the fair grounds and its half-mile track.

After a luncheon in his honor, the Governor presented the Lawrence B. Shepherd trophy to Susan Archer, 12, of Bel Air. It goes each year to the youngster under 16 who shows the greatest skill in riding and training horses.

While the Governor was being feted, judging was completed in most of the livestock divisions of the agricultural exposition.

Tractor maintenance—Calvin Humphreys and Carol Huston, of Salisbury.

How to wash a milking machine—Mary Nul and Marion Miller, of Taneytown.

Green Refuses To Sign Check In Arlington

Arlington County Treasurer John Locke Green yesterday held up the school board's purchase of a warehouse near Washington Lee High School by refusing to sign a $138,037.11 check, covering a first payment on the building.

The warehouse, at 1426 N. Quincy st., was sold to the school board, as highest bidder, for $299,750 in August. School officials said they would use it for central school offices, additional vocational shop space for the senior high school, and a central kitchen.

In a letter to Assistant School Superintendent E. J. Braun, Green gave these reasons for his refusal to sign:

1. The school board budgeted only $26,000 for capital outlay this year. Under the Virginia Code, it is not empowered to contract a debt, in excess of available funds, without the County Board's consent.

2. The purchase would violate a section of the State constitution that forbids contracting debts that can't be paid off within the year, except with consent of the voters.

School Superintendent William A. Early yesterday commented, "We're not the least bit disturbed about it." He said the school and county boards would meet jointly at 8:30 a. m. Saturday to discuss the problem, and added he thought it could be solved by a county board resolution, authorizing transfer of the money for the first payment from operating funds to capital outlay.

Col. Fowler, Bataan Hero, Dies at 51

Col. Halstead C. Fowler, 51, a hero of World War II battles in the Philippines, died early yesterday at his home, Greenway Farm, at Afton, Va.

Commander of an Army field artillery regiment during the early fighting in the Philippines, he remained with his men in the retreat down the peninsula and in the Bataan death march, although he had been wounded three times. He was interned in a Japanese prison camp from April 9, 1942, to February 4, 1945, and was blind and deaf when liberated. He never regained his health and was retired shortly after his liberation.

For his heroism in directing a makeshift force of clerks, cooks and drivers in driving off a sneak attack by the Japanese on Bataan in 1942, Colonel Fowler last March was given the Gold Cross medal by the Philippine Republic.

Since illness prevented him from coming to Washington to accept it, the Philippine Ambassador flew to his home for the presentation ceremony.

Colonel Fowler also held the Distinguished Service Cross with an oak leaf cluster, the Silver Star and the Purple Heart with two clusters.

A native of Brooklyn, he attended Johns Hopkins University and The Citadel before entering West Point, where he was graduated in 1920. He was promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel when he went to the Philippines shortly before the Japanese attack and to colonel after his liberation.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE OLD NEW ORLEANS' Nick Gaston picked out his present featured singer, Johnny Hartman, when Hartman responded to a call for a song in in a late-night spot last year. Gaston was so pleased with the young singer's voice that he asked him to sign up for a Sazarac Room engagement when he was free.

Hartman has finally arrived at the Old New Orleans, and he does have a good voice. It's rich, sure, expressive—as good as those of most well-known singers. What Hartman doesn't have yet is showmanship, and he's working on that. Meanwhile he may overplay the drama of a song, or try to be first one personality, then another. But he has all the makings of a first-rate entertainer.

On the bandstand, Frank Coviello's new band is keeping up with expectations. The outfit is sparked by Coviello's special brand of piano music. Another member who helps give it personality, however is the bull fiddler, Johnny Valencia. You may not know his name, but you've no doubt seen him at the Mayflower, the Statler, the Shoreham.

Valencia is the dark, good-looking musician whose Latin singing and guitar playing lure the guests out on the floor to try his sambas and rumbas. At the Old New Orleans he sings and plays the bull fiddle, leaves out the guitar. On the Arthur Murray TV series over WMAL, he shines on them all.

His wife dubs him a "Latin from Manhattan," but his South American ties are mighty close. Valencia's father was from Bogota, his mother from Cuba. He has spent many a vacation going back to Havana with his mother.

Regatta Queen Is Crowned By Chapman

A 20-year-old golden blonde last night was crowned queen of the 25-year-old President's Cup Regatta.

She is Miss Marilyn Lee O'Neill, no newcomer to ruling circles. Queen Marilyn is also President Marilyn of the student government at Bouve School of Physical Education in Boston. Her father, Vice Admiral Merlin O'Neill, rules the Coast Guard.

In a colorful ceremony at the Watergate, the crown descended on Marilyn's tightly drawn blonde hair from the hands of Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman.

Queen Marilyn drew Navy Lieutenant William A. Campbell, jr., the nearest thing the White House staff had to a Coast Guardsman.

But there were Coast Guardsmen aplenty to see the boss's pretty daughter assume her throne, from a score or so of sailors who formed the color guard, way on up to the boss himself.

The queen's court consisted of Anne Willis Cates, daughter of Gen. Clifton B. Cates, commandant of the Marine Corps; Anne Schlatter, daughter of Maj. Gen. D. M. Schlatter, director of research and development for the Air Force; Alice Varian, daughter of Capt. Donald C. Varian of the Navy; Joyce Clifford, daughter of Clark Clifford, former presidential aide.

Also Jean Boyle, daughter of William Boyle, chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Jo Nelson, a classmate of the queen; Virginia Summerlin, granddaughter of the late George Summerlin, former chief of protocol for the State Department; Clay Keene Bernard, niece of Col. Heinie Miller, USMCR, and Barbara Silliman, daughter of Col. Frank Silliman of the Army. And 9-year-old Vibeke Thiele, the strawberry blonde princess in waiting.

Jerry Strong, radio and television entertainer, was master of ceremonies which included music by Sidney's Orchestra under the direction of Jack Minovich; and songs by Stephen Olds, Dolores Dupont, and the Columbians, a male quartet.

The Regatta began last week with canoe races. It will enter the swimming and rowboating phase this weekend at Indian Springs Country Club and Georgetown Channel.

Buying Rush Slackening, Study Shows

By The Associated Press

A Federal Reserve Board report yesterday pointed to a considerable slackening in the buying rush that began not long after the outbreak of the Korean war.

The Board said department store sales over the Nation ran only 5 percent above a year ago during the week ended September 2, smallest margin since the Korean fighting began June 25.

Sales had boomed 46 percent above the 1949 level in the week ended July 22, which marked the peak of the consumer buying wave.

In the September 2 week, department store sales actually fell 2 percent below a year ago in the New York Federal Reserve district, which accounts for a heavy portion of national sales. They fell 1 percent in the Richmond district, which includes the Nation's capital.

Atlanta and Philadelphia district sales in that week merely held to last year's level, but there were increases in other districts, paced by a 19 percent gain at Minneapolis.

The Reserve Board report also showed department store sales in August dropped 7.5 percent below the comparatively feverish buying pace of July, when the rush for goods began. August sales, however, were 11 percent above June.

Eight Federal Reserve districts showed sales increases for the September 2 week over the previous year. The percentages of rise: Boston 2, Cleveland 6, Chicago 9, St. Louis 5, Minneapolis 19, Kansas City 9, Dallas 11, and San Francisco 8.

Brothers Say Cave Of Jesse James Found

HAMILTON, Ill., Sept. 7 (U.P.).—The cave where Jesse James may have hidden his loot has been found, a 45-year-old shoemaker said today.

Glenn Huff and his brother, Ernest, said the cave is located on a farm near Revere, Mo., and that Jesse and Frank James, the Missouri outlaws, buried between $150,000 and $200,000 in gold there.

Ex-Policeman Burned in Room Fire

An 89-year-old retired policeman was in "serious" condition at Emergency Hospital yesterday after beng pulled from a burning bedroom by his son.

John J. Sullivan, 3504 Whitehaven pkwy., nw., was rescued shortly after 10 a. m. by his son, Edward M. Sullivan, a night inspector for Capital Transit Co., who lives next door.

Damage was estimated by the son at $5000 and fire marshals said the blaze may have started from a short circuit.

The elder Sullivan was found semiconscious on the floor of his bedroom, a pail of water beside him and his clothes soaked with water. His son said he always kept a full bucket of water near him. He has lived alone in the house since his wife died in 1948, the son told police.

Sullivan suffered burns about his head, arms and shoulders and shock. He retired from the police force in 1910.

Bank Groups To Move Into New Quarters

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will start moving into its new quarters at 1760 N st. nw. on September 16, it was learned yesterday.

Office of the District of Columbia Bankers Association also will be shifted at that time.

Purchase of its own building is expected to stimulate interest in the bankers' school. For the past five years, enrollment has been so large that present classrooms in the American Security Building have been found inadequate. Boardrooms of the Union Trust Co. and Hamilton National Bank have been used.

Work of redecorating and wiring of the N st. building is nearing completion and contractors have assured chapter officials that the quarters will be ready when classes start on September 25. The three-story structure, at one time occupied by Columbus University and more recently by the Canadian Purchasing Commission, has space for five classrooms and two rooms for the association offices. Also, there is space for a possible recreation room and library.

Registration for the fall semester will be held in local banks on September 20 and 21. Samuel C. Redman, chapter president, said yesterday that it was hoped to equal last year's record enrollment of 624.

Faculty and advisory board members met at a dinner Wednesday night at the Mayflower and the educational program for the coming semester will be outlined at another dinner meeting next Tuesday.

Net income (after interest and rentals) was estimated at $269,000,000 for the first seven months of 1950. This compared with $201,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1949.

PARADOX: That some companies are worth more dead than alive is freshly illustrated in a New York bank merger. As a going business just a month ago, Brooklyn Trust Co. stock was worth $130 a share. Today the stock is priced around $230 a share, just before the institution is slated to go out of business. Its assets will be taken over by the Manufacturers Trust Co.

NEW RECORDS: Sears, Roebuck & Co. reported sales for August totaled $226,909,686, a new record for the month. This was an increase of 22.8 percent over the $184,715,610 figure in August, 1949. For the fiscal year through August 31, sales totaled $1,435,122,892, up 17 percent from the $1,226,545,275 last year. This year's seven-month figure also was a record high, the company reported.

OPTIMISTIC: Neisner Brothers, Inc., reported net profit of $309,018, equal to 43 cents a share, for the six months ended June 30 as compared with earnings of $436,324, or 64 cents a share, for the comparable period of 1949. The president of this chain of variety stores, Fred Neisner, said the decline in earnings was caused by a drop in sales, but he added that since mid-May sales have shown steady improvement. "We expect business to be satisfactory for the balance of 1950," he said.

One on the Aisle—

Gloria Runs Gamut In Memorable Film

By Richard L. Coe

"SUNSET BOULEVARD," at the Warner, is at the top of the year's list—so far. Don't miss it.

Gloria Swanson's stunning playing of a passe actress who finally blows her top after years of insincere flattery, etches a lesson of our complex era. The Brackett-Wilder duo which filmed "The Lost Weekend" has gone that one several notches better, and if some Academy Awards don't go to "Sunset Boulevard" I'll be mighty surprised.

The story is told by a screen writer who's pretty much at the end of his rope. He's even losing his car. To avoid the police he slips into a lush, overgrown estate on Hollywood Boulevard, where he is quickly ushered into the house by a taciturn butler.

And what a house it is, redolent with the overstuffed luxury of the twenties, Spanish in style, dark and dusty. The swimming pool below the terrace is overgrown with weeds that are a handy home for rodents.

The mistress of the house proves to be a middle-aged woman, dressed in an extreme style of the past, sporting a novel cigarette holder that circles one finger. His welcome, it appears, is all a mistake. The stark, nervous woman assumes he's the undertaker called to bury her pet monkey.

But she also observes that he's young and attractive. Soon she is dragging from him the reason for his flight into her property, that he's a writer of screen plays and needs money. Money the lady obviously has, a screen play is what she wants for her "return" to the screen and a young man about the house will patently be an invigorating thing to have.

She is, he discovers, Norma Desmond, one of the great names of silent days, now bypassed by studio and public. A rich woman, she still clings to the idea that her old public still awaits her return to the screen.

And so she pushes the young man into an alliance whereby she owns him body and soul. She buys him clothes, gives him a luxurious place to live. In return he tries to whip into shape for the screen her idea of a story about Salome. One day she takes him with her to the studio, where she visits her old friend Cecil B. DeMille on the set. She tells him of her new role and thinks he's interested. When the studio calls, it's only to ask if they can hire her car for a period scene.

A Lesson in Values

Vying for the young man is a girl writer who has no conception of the liaison she threatens. By the time the man decides to break away from his unwholesome atmosphere, Norma's insanity breaks into violence. She kills the young man and on her way to the police wagon imagines that the newsreel cameras are those of the great set where once she reigned. "All right, Mr. DeMille, I am ready," she shouts as she weaves her way down her lavish staircase.

This is a film to be understood in adult terms. It is stating, coldly and bitterly, what can happen when wealth and flattery are lavished beyond their true value. It is a lesson if you will, on our appalling false sense of values.

The screen play by Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder and D. M. Marshman, jr., has splendidly natural dialogue and numberless memorable scenes. While the flashback telling by the dead hero is an unnecessary tour-de-force, there is a heated honesty about the writing that overcomes this needless defect. With the exception of Hedda Hopper's minute scene gabbing with her city desk, there is fine realism to all the supporting characters. You'll be fascinated by Norma's weekly cardplaying visitors: Anna Q. Nilsson, Buster Keaton and H. B. Warner, all stars of the period.

Miss Swanson's Terrific

As Norma, Gloria Swanson has the role of a lifetime and gives it the fire and zest which only she could command. She's called on for all the works: Comedy in a spoof of Mack Sennett bathing beauty days, a brilliant immitation of Charlie Chaplin; pathetic drama as an older woman in love with a young man; lurid melodrama throughout and especially in her final crackup. It is a portrait of a shattered spirit and can be seen again and again for the variety of its effects.

William Holden, too, is exactly right as the confused, ambitious young man who sells his youth to the devil. Erich von Stroheim's role of the butler and his long rule over Norma's life is chillingly depicted and Nancy Olson is fine as the young woman in Holden's life. A good word, too, goes for Hans Drier's and John Meehan's eloquent settings of a vanished Hollywood era.

Tuckered Out

Poor Abe, The Pigeon, Passes Away

Abe, the tired pigeon who refused to fly after landing in an office of the Ring Building Wednesday, is dead.

Apparently the victim of exhaustion from a long flight, he died early yesterday at the home of Barnie Vierling, president of the Aircraft Supply Co.

Abe had chosen one of the company's eighth floor offices for his temporary hangar. Vierling decided to take the bird to his home at 719 Grandview dr., Alexandria, after Abe had refused to fly off, despite many proddings.

The Vierling's two boys, Larry, 8½, and Bruce, 5, greeted Abe with much curiosity Wednesday night. They were up bright and early yesterday morning to check his condition. But Abe was dead.

'Mad' Divorcees Put Draft Finger On Ex-Husbands

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 (AP).—Some former wives are making sure the draft doesn't miss their former husbands.

Illinois Selective Service officials said today many divorcees are writing draft boards to make certain their former husbands are still not listed as married.

U. Va. to Admit Negro Applicant

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—President Colgate W. Darden, jr., said today the University of Virginia will admit Gregory Hayes Swanson to its graduate law school if he applies for registration.

Swanson, Negro attorney of Martinsville, applied for admission, but the university's board of visitors rejected the application last July on the ground the State's constitution, statutes and policy prohibited the admittance of Negroes to all-white institutions.

On Tuesday, a three-judge Federal court held the university board erred in denying him admission and directed that Swanson and others "similarly situated" be admitted to the law school.

Darden reserved comment on the court's decision, which is expected to be placed before the board of visitors at a meeting here Friday. Registration will begin at the university September 15.

Duff Keeps 'Meller' Moving As a Photog in 'Shakedown'

AFTER A START so ragged you almost wish they'd go back and begin again, "Shakedown" settles into a long, easy stride and gives you a good ride. It's at the Columbia.

Howard Duff plays a photographer in the film, a ruthless, ambitious heel beloved by nobody except a girl. As Bruce Bennett, the managing editor of the paper he works on, puts it, "You never had a mother. You were put together in some machine shop."

Playing the cad is what some actors like to do best, providing, of course, that it's the leading role. Duff does very well with it in this. Bennett is usually unsatisfactory to me and he remains so in "Shakedown." He lacks steam and, despite the years he has spent in Hollywood, or maybe because of them, he still can't talk. Peggy Dow tries hard, but it's preposterous to vision her as the picture editor of a daily paper in San Francisco. Brian Donlevy is his old self in a comparatively brief role, and Anne Vernon is excellent as his wife.

Duff, worms his way into the better graces of a gambling figure in the city, gets the goods on a rival crook, and proceeds to play both ends against the middle. Needless to report, he gets caved in on in the end. It's good fast stuff and mostly plausible, even though Duff is forced to go it alone for most of the way. The picture seems to have been filmed in San Francisco, although no advantage has been taken of the city's atmosphere and situation in the camera work.

Alfred Lewis Levitt and Martin Goldsmith wrote the good script from a story by Nat Dallinger and Don Martin. Joe Pevney capably directed.

Joe Laurie, jr., whom you wouldn't really expect to be funny, is most amusing in a short subject at the Columbia about three cub bears. It's a reissue, I understand, and it's easy to see why they brought it out again. It's very nice indeed.

"SHAKEDOWN." Universal-International release produced by Ted Richmond. Screen play by Alfred Lewis and Martin Goldsmith from a story by Nat Dallinger and Don Martin. Photographed by Irving Glassberg. Directed by Joe Pevney. At the Columbia.

SUNSET BOULEVARD
A Paramount Picture starring
GLORIA SWANSON WILLIAM HOLDEN ERICH von STROHEIM is the Greatest Picture to Hit Washington

Read the Reviews!

Any effort you make to see "Sunset Boulevard" which is at the Warner and Ambassador will be richly rewarded. In making this entertaining saga of a faded cinema star played by Gloria Swanson, Paramount would have appeared to have swept all the Merit Awards for 1950.
Jay Carmody, The Evening Star

This grim, unrelenting study of a star of the silents who lives in an unreal world bounded by the memorabalia of her past is thoroughly engrossing entertainment.... "Sunset Boulevard" has the makings of one of the biggest hits in years..... Miss Swanson's performance as the half-mad actress is almost painfully exciting and will most certainly earn the recognition she deserves.
Ernie Schier, Times-Herald

"SUNSET BOULEVARD" at the Warner is at the top of the year's list so far . . . Gloria Swanson's stunning portrayal of a passe actress who finally blows her top after years of insincere flattery etches a lesson of our complex era .....
The Brackett and Wilder duo, which filmed "The Lost Weekend", has gone that one several notches better and if some Academy Awards don't go to "Sunset Boulevard" I'll be mighty surprised.
What's more it's a picture that will stand the test of time.
Dick Coe, The Washington Post

Biggest movie story of the year is the sensational comeback of Gloria Swanson, one of the most glamorous of the stars of the silent films, in "Sunset Boulevard" ..... Critics all over are saying the Academy can't help but award her an Oscar, no matter what happens between now and the end of the year.

Christ Shown In Mosaic Of Stamps

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Christ is drawing much attention on the stamp bourse at the Shoreham.

Christ in stamps . . . a dramatic mosaic backdropping the main-ballroom booth of the Mission Stamp Exchange, Woodstock, Md., one of the many booths selling stamps in connection with the American Philatelic Society convention.

That exchange is a maryel itself. "Save Stamps, Save Souls," they say. A Jesuit school to which good Catholics — stenographers, firms, clubs—send two mailbags of stamps a day.

In the evening the young students for the priesthood at the College of the Sacred Heart sort the stamps. They bring $200 a month to take the Catholic Church's banner to India and the Philippines.

Down from Woodstock to operate the booth, two young Jesuit students for priesthood tell you about the exchange. Robert A. Bomeisl, S.J., who is very short and blackhaired, and William J. Cavey, S.J., who is tall and blond. Both are amiable.

"We even had a Frankie Sinatra fan club sending some stamps," said Mr. Bomeisl. "Some people send albums. Some batches of stamps. Ordinary three-cent stamps, everything.

"Father Haggerty started the stamp exchange in 1931. He was later famous as the guerilla padre in the Philippines, you know. We were the first Jesuit exchange in the country, though the Maryknoll order really started the idea. We sell mixtures or individual stamps, anything.

"Yes, the mosaic is remarkable, isn't it?" he went on. "It was inspired by the Twelfth Station, a glass mosaic executed by Elsa Schmid in 1931. The stamp mosaic was done by the Rev. Anthony G. Schirmann, S.J., when he was studying for the priesthood at Woodstock. He's now one of the editors of Jesuit Missions Magazine in New York.

"Father Schirmann used 4324 stamps altogether. He used 533 one-cent stamps, 297 two-cent, 2090 three-cent, 340 four-cent, 109 six-cent, 3 nine-cent, 764 ten-cent, 110 fifteen-cent and 4 twenty-cent. He worked three hours a week for 16 months to finish it."

"It's all stamps, nothing else," said Mr. Cavey, the tall priesthood-student. "Even the eyebrows and the lips—they're the edges of stamps—they're not pencil or paint marks."

The Christ looked down in a richness of color—rich purple background with bright red lettering, green cross. Spelled out above the title which Pilate chose. . . . I. N. R. I. . . . Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews.

Mr. Cavey grinned. "Off and on. It goes in spurts."

Stamp Society Auction Nets Record $28,000

The unusually high proceeds from stamp sales were recorded Wednesday as the sixty-fourth annual convention got under way at the Shoreham Hotel.

The grand award for the best frame of United States was awarded to Earl Antrim of Nampa, Idaho, and the grand award for foreign stamps to Eugene E. Blazier of Vancouver, Wash.

Society President Wilbur F. Cannon presided at the banquet, attended by more than 200, and Harry F. Lindquist of New York was toastmaster.

Those at the head table who made short addresses were Admiral George C. Dyer, Herbert S. Chamberlain of the Postoffice Department, Sol Glass, Van Dyk MacBride, Chester A. Smeltzer, Ralph Kimble and Svend Yort.

Today the final business session will be held, along with various chapter meetings.

Muntz Now Plans To Make Autos

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 (AP).—Earl W. (Madman) Muntz, flamboyant dealer in Los Angeles' postwar used car boom market, said today he plans to produce his own brand of automobiles.

He said it will do 140 miles an hour and will retail for about $5000.

He and two accociates obtained an Illinois charter August 31 for the Muntz Car Co., Inc. They were authorized 2,000,000 shares of common stock with no par value and filed notice that initial financing would come from issuance of 275,000 of these shares at one dollar each.

Muntz has been making and retailing television sets since he quit his West Coast auto sales business.

Your Youngster Starts School

Don't Look for Tricks to Teach Child to Read

This is the last of a series directed to parents whose children are starting to school. Dr. Hymes is Professor of Education at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn. These articles were selected from "Three to Six," just published by Public Affairs Committee, New York.

By James L. Hymes, Jr.

CHAPTER SIX

There comes a time when children deeply want to learn how to read. Good schools know this. And strangely . . . you really know it too. You have seen its counterpart all during your child's growing up.

You couldn't keep him from crawling . . . not when he was one month, but when he had grown enough to crawl.

You couldn't keep him from going upstairs . . . not when he was six months, but when he had grown enough to climb.

You couldn't keep him from talking . . . not when he was 10 months, but when he had grown enough to jabber.

The same will hold true with reading.

Youngsters love to read. It makes them feel big. It gives them excitement. It tells facts. This is a skill they want. But they want it when they have grown enough.

He'll Read When Ready

To help your child get a good start in school, be sure his teacher knows: "I'm not concerned about reading. I know it will come when he is ready."

Be sure the teacher knows you aren't worried. That you are not anxiously waiting for the day to come. Be sure she feels your support. Be sure she knows that you want her to "make hay while the sun shines" . . . to capitalize today on what your child can do now and tomorrow to capitalize on what he will be able to do then.

Two things help a great deal when children are at the beginning of reading. You can encourage your child's school to do a lot of both of them.

The first: reading stories to children. Some people, parents as well as teachers, think: the more you read to children, the less they will want to read themselves. It works the opposite. The more stories they hear, the more they discover that books can be fun. The more words they listen to, the more books with pictures they see, the easier it is for youngsters to want to read.

A Love for Story-Time

You know from your home-living with children that this age really loves story-time. Don't be stingy with it yourself. Be glad if your child's teacher isn't stingy.

The second help: taking trips. This whole age range (and many other ages) loves to go out to see things.

Beginning-schoolers like things near at hand and not too complicated or exciting: a fire station, an airport, the railroad station or bus terminal, a farm, a bakery shop, a postoffice, a store . . . every-day places where everyday people are doing real jobs . . . places where there is some action but not necessarily a three-ring circus!

Trips like these are wonderful for strengthening language, observation, a healthy curiosity . . . They make books come alive.

No Quick Wonders

Some parents still worry if their child does not read a book one-two-three. They look for quick tricks that will work wonders. Today the favorite magic is phonics.

"They ought to drill more on phonics. They did when I went to school" . . . thirty years ago . . . Rat, cat, sat, mat, fat, bat, hat.

There is money today in cashing-in on this common fear. School systems are being persuaded to buy all knds of special systems for teaching phonics.

There is a real place for phonics in learning to read. All good teachers will help children with phonics . . . as one way of learning to recognize new words. But there are lots of other important ways too. A good teacher uses them all. She has to because phonics can trap children. Many words that look alike have different sounds (now, how, cow . . . low, show.)

These special systems are a way of pressure-cooking children. They are usually used on children who are not really ready to read.

Too much pressure with little tricks like these can deaden children's interest in reading. Or the children may read (after a struggle) but in a very mechanical way . . . dull, flat, saying-words-one-after-the-other with no feelng.

Beware of wonder-ways of teaching reading. This is a complicated skill that calls for play first, growing next, and a real urge to want to read.

'Tele-Viewers' Organize to Fight Feared Color TV

By the United Press

A non-profit, educational organization representing television set owners was formed here yesterday and immediately took issue with a Federal Communications Commission report favoring a non-compatible color TV system.

The new group, known as the Association of Tele-Viewers, said its main purpose is to "act as liaison between its members and the television industry and governmental agencies."

But its first action was to protest an FCC report which said the Columbia Broadcasting System's non-compatible color TV method was the best the commission has seen to date.

The association said it "feared" the FCC announcement may be followed by a ruling which would threaten the seven million TV sets now in use, which cost two billion dollars, with "overnight obsolescence."

The Muir Case

Drop One Hot Potato And You Get Another

By John Crosby

ALL HELL broke loose in the nursery while I was away. A man can't leave the room for a minute without the children getting into trouble.

A press release from Young and Rubicam which handles the Henry Aldrich show for General Foods states: "Miss (Jean) Muir's wide experience as a mature actress and the real-life mother of three young children has ideally equipped her for the role of Mrs. Aldrich, who guides her family with a loving and understanding hand."

Jean Muir

A few days after the press release was issued General Foods decided Miss Muir wasn't at all ideally equipped for the part, that she was a "controversial personality," whatever that is. Her name had appeared in a pamphlet called "Red Channels," which purports to list Communist and subversive influences in radio and television. Despite her vehement denials of any sympathy or connection with communism and without any investigation, Miss Muir was fired after about 15 people had protested. General Foods admitted that the move was made as a gesture to public relations, that it couldn't afford to get mixed up with controversy. In short, it dropped one hot potato and suddenly found itself with one of the hottest potatoes in its corporate history. This decision easily wins it the Crosby award for the public relations coup of 1950.

WHAT'S going on here, anyhow? I pass hurriedly over the shocking abuses to Miss Muir's civil liberties which are too obvious to warrant further comment, to another, more intriguing matter.

Ever since it was first published a month or ago, "Red Channels" has become a sort of unofficial blacklist of the radio and television industry. It is a little pamphlet, a sort of supplement to "Counterattack," a publication whose aim is purportedly to combat communism. "Red Channels" is little more than a list of 150 names of actors, writers and directors, including some of the finest in the country, who are supposed to be subversive influences.

The charges against these people were culled from press clippings, from old letterheads, from unsubstantiated accusations at Congressional hearings, and it was compiled by a couple of former FBI agents, one of them named Kirkpatrick. Names of known Communists rest cheek-by-jowl next to names of violently anti-Communist actors and writers whose opinions are well known and easily determined if these former FBI agents had bothered to check up.

TO GET TO THE HEART of the matter, how come a huge corporation like General Foods ever allowed itself to be intimidated by anything as small and utterly unofficial as this publication? The 500-million-dollar-a-year broadcasting industry now accepts "Red Channels" almost as a Bible. Why?

General Foods decision has been widely attacked as a violation of Miss Muir's right to earn a living. But I'd like to point out that it was also pretty childish.

Hot Soup a Double Treat on Chill Days

THE PERFECT DAYS OF September are the perfect time for perfect soups! Have fun making them yourself with fresh vegetables and rich soup stock

By Lucia Brown

SING a song of soup now that September's here.

Chill days make a hot plate doubly welcome, and the rich store of late summer vegetables gives you plenty to work with.

If you're making vegetable soup "from scratch," you can use as a basis the cracked shin or knuckle bones of beef (with enough meat left on to know it's been there!). Brown it first in the oven or dry soup pot to give the stock richer flavor and color.

Simmer the bone about four hours to extract the last bit of goodness, then add fine fresh vegetables to suit your fancy. Cut them in small pieces and simmer in the stock about a half hour. Don't overcook! And if you're using any of the cabbage family, wait until the last minute to add. They can become overpowering in flavor and aroma!

SEASONING'S a prime soup secret. Chopped fresh parsley does much for a pot of soup. So does a pinch of thyme. A red pepper pod, a clove of garlic, and a whole clove add flavor and fragrance. If you're afraid of losing them in the soup, stick the clove in the garlic and tie it tightly to the pepper pod with a thread. Then tie the other end of the thread to the handle of the pan, so you can remove these explosive seasonings before serving.

Or maybe you'd like to make Onion Soup, that filling French favorite. Broil French bread and Parmesan cheese to make a delicious topping. Here is an authentic recipe:

FRENCH ONION SOUP

6 large onions, sliced
¼ cup butter
½ medium yellow turnip, diced
½ bunch celery tops, chopped
1½ quarts soup stock, or 3 bouillon cubes and 1½ quarts boiling water
2 anchovies
Dash of allspice
Pepper and salt
Dash of mace
8 slices French bread
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese.

Saute onions in butter until golden brown. Add turnip and celery tops to soup stock. Heat, add anchovies and seasonings. Cook until vegetables are very tender, about 20 minutes. Force vegetables through strainer. Return pulp to liquid, add onions and butter and simmer 5 minutes. Season well. Broil slices of French bread with cheese. Pour soup in bowls and float bread on top. This makes 6 to 8 portions.

HEARTY cream soups make a fine beginning for dinner or a good main dish for lunch. Appledorf Soup, made of milk and potato puree, is one that's a treat. Serve it with saltines sprinkled with grated American cheese, broiled just long enough to melt the cheese.

THIS IS APPLEDORF, a soup of substance. It's made of milk and potatoes, has a colorful swirl of catsup on top of each cup

APPLEDORF SOUP

4 cups diced raw potatoes
½ cup diced onion
1 cup diced celery
2 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons butter
⅛ teaspoon pepper
4 cups milk
2 tablespoons minced parsley
¼ cup catsup

Cook potatoes and celery in boiling water to cover until tender. Drain and puree vegetables, saving vegetable juice. Cook minced onion in butter over low heat until tender, about 5 minutes. Add seasonings, milk, 2/3 cup vegetable juice, pureed vegetables, and minced parsley. Heat thoroughly, stir in catsup, garnishing with swirl on top of each bowl. Serves six.

TOP FRENCH ONION SOUP with toasted rounds of French bread, covered with Parmesan cheese

Mary Haworth's Mail

After 15 Years' Effort to Save Their Marriage, Couple Are So Miserable That Wife Would Leave, If She Didn't Fear Independence; Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is an unhappy marriage. We have stuck it out for 15 years, and we both are so miserable and nervous now that I feel it is time to give up. I have tried, honestly I have, to make a go of it; and I could never explain on paper the basic trouble. A labyrinth of faults has developed on both sides, each new ramification stemming from a previous underlying cause.

I never dreamed a time would come when I would write to a stranger about a problem; but I have no family, nor any friends so close that I could trust them. You often tell disturbed persons to get help from a psychiatrist, but it is hard to select a specialist, when you don't know any by repute. So will you please advise me.

I hesitate to leave Carl only because it would put me completely on my own, and I have responsibility for a lovely 13-year-old daughter. Jane knows nothing of the basic trouble, is very happy here, and has many lovely friends, a nice home and security.

Carl has said he will give me $50 monthly for support, and if I contest that offer he will quit everything, including his job, and we will lose everything that we have worked for. That illustrates one of his traits that I've had to fight most—an unreasonable attitude of always "getting even" with people, and never any offer to help solve a problem mutually. I can't stand the present set-up any longer; but if we separate, am I wrongly sacrificing my daughter's happiness and maybe even preventing her proper growth?

A. P.

Dependent Bias Is Wife's Cross

DEAR A. P.: It seems to me that your letter personifies an overwhelming degree of dependency; and perhaps this is the real source of your deadly exasperation with Carl, and his commensurate irritation with you.

A completely helpless air is implicit in two aspects of your letter. Firstly, in your statement that you never could explain on paper the basic trouble. Secondly, in your bland assumption that somehow I shall be able to do your thinking for you in this crisis, and provide for you a constructive decision, even without any data to go on.

Maybe it's true that you cou'dn't put over the picture even if you tried. But the significant fact is, you didn't try. And it's a very old proverb that "The Lord helps those who help themselves." Inasmuch as you are calling for earnest cooperation in easing personal difficulties, you ought to be willing to work hard at the task of establishing communications. But it seems you are conditioned to "let John do it," as the saying goes; to vaguely proclaim discomfort and need, and then wait limply for heaven—or a husband—or somebody—to take charge.

Heal Thyself, Then Move On

I am speaking, of course, of your unconscious emotional constitution; because in surface affairs, say in cooking, cleaning, marketing, etc., you may be aggressively active much of the time. You have an urgent inclination to leave Carl, who is willing to subsidize separation on a modest scale, you say. And yet you hold back because you don't want to be "completely on your own" with Jane; that is, without a partner to be held responsible both for your miseries and your total upkeep.

All things considered, I think you ought to recognize yourself as your major problem; or at least your most immediate problem,—and not leave Carl until you've put yourself to rights. Just as you suspect, and try to dodge, you'll need psychiatric help in this endeavor. And it's up to you to discover a choice of reputable specialists in your territory. By checking the telephone book for your local Medical Society, or asking a leading clergyman for a reliable reference list of psychiatric clinics or doctors, you can get on the right track.

For your social salvation, you need to work towards emotional maturity and psychological insight. Then you'll be able to chart the course that is best for your child. If it means staying with Carl, you will then stay with basic peace of mind, enduring the surface fret philosophically. And if it means parting from him as a therapeutic move, to let wounds heal on both sides, you will go forth with good heart to explore a new field of self reliant experience.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

New League Platform

Campaign for Office, Women Voters Urged

THE LEAGUE of Women Voters, which heretofore spent most of its election-time energy getting women to the ballot box, is going one step further this year. Now it's trying to get the ladies on the ballots themselves, by encouraging them to join the various parties and take an active part in local politics.

Of course, the league, which strives for nonpartisanship, doesn't care which political party its members join—just so they pitch in and campaign for their party and run for office.

First trial of the league's new education program is the Institute of Practical Politics which the Arlington League will conduct all day Saturday, September 16, at the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School.

"You Can Be the Life of the Party!" is the theme of the afternoon round table discussion among Arlington political leaders. Speakers will include Harrison Mann, chairman of the Arlington County Democratic Committee; Mrs. Wilma McPherson, president of the Virginia Council of Republican Women; Mrs. Ruby Simpson, deputy treasurer of Arlington County, and Mrs. Festus Foster, president of the League of Women Voters of Virginia.

The luncheon program will feature speeches by Mrs. India Edwards, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. Peter Miller, publisher and editor of the Washington Times-Herald.

The institute will open at 10:30 a. m. with a round table discussion of "What's the United States to You?" Participants will be Charles Fenwick, State Senator from Arlington County; Mrs. Florence Cannon, Arlington County board member, Charles O. Pratt, and Mrs. George Davis, jr., mayor of Washington, Va. Dr. Louise Young, author of "Understanding Politics" will be moderator.

The Washington Post

WOMEN OF ARLINGTON will take a livelier interest in politics this fall than ever before, if members of the League of Women Voters have their way. This trio of officers in the organization is pictured preparing kits of literature which will be distributed at the first all-day session of the Institute of Practical Politics, Saturday, September 16, at Thomas Jefferson High School. Mrs. William Wildback, president of the Arlington League (right), inspects one of the pamphlets which is held by Mrs. Gordon Losee, first vice president. At left is Mrs. Curtis Johnson of the Voters Service

Margaret Wiles, Mr. Palmer Engaged

Announcement is made by Mrs. Burner Wiles of Washington of the engagement of her daughter, Margaret, to Cameron Bruce Palmer, son of Dr. J. Williston Palmer and the late Mrs. Palmer of Arlington, Va.

Learn the secret of skin "Lipoids" and how they can help you to younger-looking beauty

Frances Denney

OILS of the WILDERNESS

$6 jar for only $3.60 including 20% tax

A beautiful skin is a young-looking skin. But it only looks young when well supplied with lipoids . . . the natural oils so abundant in a baby's skin. Do you look older than you want to? Is your skin dry? Do you have any lines or wrinkles? Is there a hint, perhaps, of sagginess or "crepeiness" around the throat or temples? Have time, work, and worry, illness, too much sun and wind, robbed you of young-looking beauty? Then you need Oils of the Wilderness, a correctly balanced lipoid beauty preparation. Oils of the Wilderness can help transform a tired, lined, fatigued face into one which looks fresher, lovelier.

Mrs. George McGhee Hostess at Farewell Party for the Hares

By Marie McNair

MRS. GEORGE McGHEE, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, came to town yesterday only long enough to entertain with Mr. McGhee at a farewell cocktail party for Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hare. Mr. Hare, former Deputy Assistant Secretary of State, has been named Ambassador to Saudi Arabia and will leave the end of the month for his new post.

Pretty Cecilia McGhee has been at Farmer's Delight, her country place at Middleburg, Va., the whole summer long. "And I'm going back right after the dishes are washed," she said yesterday, with a twinkle in her blue eyes. She'll be back for good next week, however, "to try to fit my children's bare feet into shoes again," among other things.

The party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. McGhee was a State Department family affair, the 200 or more guests including members of the Near East, South Asian and African Affairs division of the State Department and their wives; and a group from the field service of the Department, who happen to be in this area at the moment.

Mr. McGhee's Deputy, Burton Y. Berry and Mrs. Berry, were there and also, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert G. Mathews, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Rountree, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer H. Bourgeria and Mr. and Mrs. Fraser Wilkins.

DID YOU KNOW: That Miss Rose Greely, who has designed many of Washington's lush gardens, has a summer cottage 14 miles from Norway, 15 miles from Paris, 23 miles from Denmark, 23 miles from Naples, 25 miles from Sweden, 27 miles from Poland, 37 miles from Mexico, 46 miles from Peru, and 94 miles from China!

No kidding. Her Tyrolean summer house at Center Conway, N. H., is 3 miles from the Maine border. Those are all towns in Maine according to a sign on the Lovell-Norway road.

GEN. AND MRS. JOHN N. GREELY, who have been visiting the General's sister at Center Conway, will be back soon after a stopover at Sconset, Mass.

ON THE PARTY FRONT: The Israel Embassy's new Press Counselor, H. H. Levin, and Mrs. Levin, entertained at a reception yesterday afternoon at the Israel Embassy, to introduce themselves to Washington's press corps. As the Israel Ambassador, Aubrey Evan, is newer in Washington than Mr. Levin, diplomatic protocol forbade his attendance.

Mrs. Levin has had considerable success as a painter, has exhibited in London and Australia and hopes to show her work, now on its way here, to Washington artists and art lovers, at a later date.

BRAZIL'S green and yellow flag flew from the doorway at Dr. and Mme. Accioly's home on Fordham rd. yesterday, celebrating Brazilian Independence Day.

Dr. Accioly, Ambassador to the Organization of American States, and Mme. Accioly, were entertaining at a reception yesterday afternoon for the Brazilian colony in Washington, with the Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, and the Admiral Flavio Medeiros, Chief of Staff of the Brazilian Navy, among the guests.

WEDDING BELLS: Two brides-elect—Marion Norris and Roxanne Kuter, were in the spotlight yesterday.

Miss Norris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, who will be married September 14 to William H. Smith of Alexandria, shared honors with her fiance at a cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. William W. Koontz of Alexandria. And Major General and Mrs. Laurence Kuter's picnic supper at Andrews Air Force Base was for members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests assembled here for the wedding of General and Mrs. Kuter's daughter and Robert D. Williamson, which takes place today.

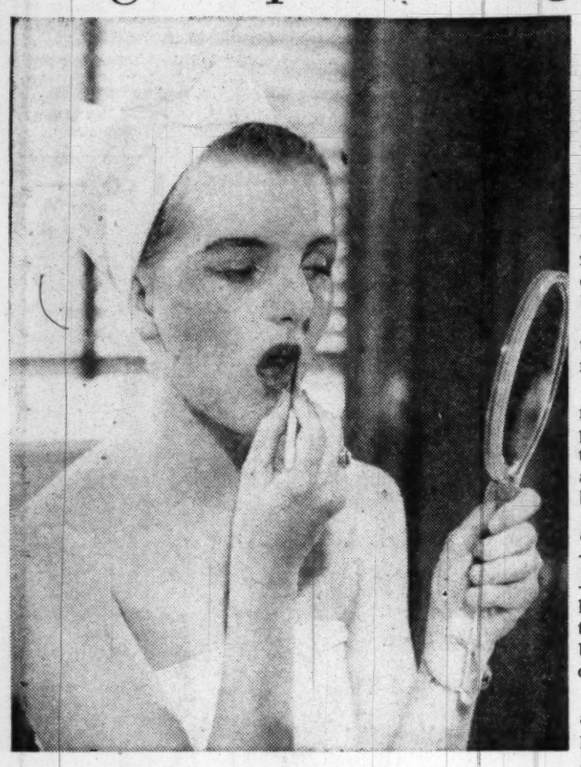
Experiment Margaret

Rouge, Lipstick Heighten Shape of Face, Color



MARGARET learns to use a lipstick brush

(Sixth day of Margaret's two weeks' program.)

By Ann Lawrence

THE average college miss makes very little use of rouge. But because Margaret's skin is so pale—and because added color was needed to play up her eyes—the faintest touch of rouge was added to her make-up chart.

Cream rouge (because it is more natural looking), cloud-light in consistency, clear red in color, was chosen. It was applied in a triangular patch, from just below the outside corner of her eyes down to a point half an inch from her nose, and back in a sweep to the top of the jawbone. Lightly blended, it not only added the necessary touch of color, but helped to make her face a more perfect oval.

Her face is widest at the point where the rouge was applied; her chin is quite narrow and pointed. By shadowing the widest part with the rouge, her chin and jaw line seemed softer and rounder; her features were brought into better balance.

Powder Goes On in Patches

POWDER, in the same golden-sun color as the make-up base, was the next touch. She learned to apply it in big patches, much more than was needed for the final result, then to brush away the excess with a clean piece of cotton.

Next, Margaret took an ordinary toothbrush and used it to sweep away every trace of excess powder from her hair line, eyebrows and eyelashes. We've found that a toothbrush turns the trick neatly, is easy to grasp, economical and is easily kept clean. Next step was to apply lipstick with a brush.

For practice, we gave her a sheet of paper and drew upon it the outline she was to transfer to her lips. To accustom herself to the feel of a brush, she drew several outlines on the paper, and each time, came closer to duplicating the line we had drawn.

Brush Rounds Out the Lips

THEN cupping two fingers under her skin, and balancing her chin on them (as illustrated), she found that her thumb and forefinger were steady and sure. In a matter of moments she traced the gentle curve she had seen on paper onto her upper lip. Her mouth began to lose its "pinched" look. Her lips were fuller and rounder, which served again to broaden her too-pointed chin. Her bottom lip, too, needed to be fuller and wider. Again, she practiced on paper, drawing a half-moon with her brush until she achieved a rounded curve.

Then she worked on the lip itself, starting at the outside corner and painting the color on just under the edge of the lower lip. The brush stroke swept to the center of the lips, then started again at the other far corner of the mouth and curved to meet the first line.

More than pleased with the results, Margaret blotted her lips on another piece of paper, then powdered over the outline and blotted it again so that she might keep it for permanent record and practice.

A touch of powder on the lips themselves set the color, would keep it fresh and intact for hours without a smear.

Say It in Silk For Fall Dresses

When I emphasized quality some time ago, I had in mind particularly the importance of real silk fabrics in fall dresses. For "silk" and quality have always been almost synonymous—that's how the "silk-stocking crowd" got its name!

There is a much wider choice in silk dress fabrics this fall than for several years. Silk taffeta of course is one of the most popular and there are interesting new variations as the very smart silk barathea. The silk failles—from the very supple silk tissue faille to the crisp satin failles—are also very important. Then there are handsome all-silk brocades, in small, solid-color patterns for theater suits; and beautiful heavy satins for long formal evening gowns.

Say it in silk when choosing your fall wardrobe.

Your Figure, Madame

Fast, Safe Reducing Calls for Extensive Amounts of Protein

By Ida Jean Kain

BY AND LARGE, most firm decisions to slim down are made at the beginning of a new season. Suddenly energized into action, you decide to diet, but strictly. In that frame of mind you look around for the fastest, safe reducing diet possible. Fair enough . . . but you will have to use every trick of science if your diet is to be fast and safe. Every food included in the three daily meals must be there for a specific reason.

What's new in slimming nutrition? The recognized importance of having complete protein with every meal. It has been proved that you have more energy and can slim down faster when you have an egg for breakfast; cheese, lean meat, fish or a second egg at lunch, plus (skim) milk for protein and calcium; and lean meat or fish at dinner.

Protein is not only an essential part of every cell, but extra protein (an amount beyond that needed for repair) can be a powerful help in reducing. That's because protein stimulates the body processes. It's all summed up in the term "specific dynamic action." The power of protein to build slimness is made startlingly clear when you realize that you can reduce faster on a diet that includes protein at each meal, than you can on exactly the same number of calories but with less protein. That's nutrition magic.

Dieters who write to complain that they do not lose on a low-calorie diet, or that they feel tired, usually list the foods eaten to prove the calories are very low . . . and reveal their main trouble is lack of protein foods. They are not applying the science of nutrition.

Basic nutrition requirements do not change, even when you are dieting to take off fat. The same materials are needed daily to repair the wear and tear on tissues . . . therefore the foods which furnish these materials cannot be left out.

But calories must be cut to lose weight . . . so the foods which furnish only calories without essential nutrients are slashed. There are ample calories stored in the extra pounds; and when the body is forced to draw on these stored calories for part of its energy needs, weight is lost. When all the necessary nutrients are provided in adequate amounts, the body is not short-changed on protection.

Seal Cosmetic Containers With Wax or Nail Polish To Avoid Spilling in Travel

DEAR ANNE:

I am planning to sail for Europe this month and would like an answer to one of my problems. How do I pack bottles of perfume, nail polish, etc.? Is there a way so that contents will not be spilled no matter how suitcases are handled? M. M., Arlington, Va.

There are several good ways of doing this, though I wouldn't absolutely guarantee any of them against reckless bag bouncers. You can seal bottle tops with melted paraffin, candle wax, or clear nail polish. Or you can stick gummed cellophane tape carefully around the place where bottle and top meet.

DEAR ANNE:

Do you know if there are any art courses offered in Washington to the general public? I am not interested in a professional course, rather something for an amateur with some art experience.

Mrs. H. C. Finlayson, 5000 Columbia Pike.

The YWCA will offer instruction in water color, pastel, gauche, charcoal, and oils, including portraiture, this fall. Telephone Metropolitan 2100 for more information.

The Department of Agriculture Graduate School has classes in pencil sketching, freehand drawing, portrait painting in oils, and water color painting. Telephone Republic 4142, extension 6337, for a description of courses.

An advertising art class is scheduled by the Evening Schools of the Public Schools of the District of Columbia. They can be contacted by calling Sterling 6111, extension 382.

DEAR ANNE:

We plan a christening party. Could you tell me if you know a good champagne punch? We thought a punch bowl party might be more festive than just cocktails and would S-T-R-E-T-C-H the champagne. There would be 20 to 30 people.

Mrs. T. M. L., Falls Church, Va.

CHAMPAGNE PUNCH
(To Serve 30)

3 cups sugar
2 cups lemon juice
4 cups canned pineapple, cubed
1½ quarts ice water
1 quart strawberries (fresh or frozen)
2 bottles Champagne
1 bottle Sauterne

Chill Champagne and Sauterne thoroughly. Dissolve sugar in lemon juice. Combine in punch bowl with pineapple. Add a large square of ice. Add chilled Sauterne and ice water. Just before serving, add strawberries and Champagne, thoroughly chilled.

Dear Anne:

Are there any preparations that can waterproof wood? For example, a wooden indoors clothes drier that becomes discolored from the moisture and stains the clothes.

M. Frankel, Washington

Giving the rack a couple of coats of spar varnish is one way of remedying the trouble. This will seal the surface and is quite resistant to water. (It's used on ships and boats.) Before applying the varnish, scrub the drier thoroughly, rinse with clear water and let dry in sun.

Women in the Food Industry

Health and Happiness Depends on Diet

This is the fourth in a series of Friday features on "Women in the Food Industry"

By Elspeth Bennett

Manager of the nutrition service department of the Ralston Purina Co., St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, SEPT. 7.—It's been a long time since I rode muleback through the mountains of Kentucky, observing first-hand the vengeance that unwise eating and poor nutrition works on the human body. Those were the days when I was nutritionist for the Kentucky Department of Public Health.

But I am still sold, as I was then, on the need for improving the American diet and the importance of the work most big food companies are doing along that line.

Lots of time and money have been and are being spent by the various food companies to impress on Mrs. Housewife the simple basic fact that if she and her family don't eat the right variety of foods every day, their health (not to mention their fun in life) will sink to zero.

As nutritionist for one of these big food companies, I know of the time and money spent. It is part of my job to make life a little easier for the meal-planner, trying to safeguard her family's health and happiness.

Among my most important—and most satisfying responsibilities, is the development of diets for the undernourished, the well-padded, for infants and for allergy suffers.

My other duties include developing and promoting educational material in the field of nutrition for teachers, especially home economics teachers; keeping physicians, dietitians, home economists and editors informed on the nutritional values and dietary uses of Ralston products and initiating development of recipes and recipe books to stretch the food dollar and save the homemaker's time. At present I am working on new quantity recipes for school lunch programs which will utilize surplus, Government-stored foods.

Get Credit for Improvement

AMERICA'S big food companies, through their efforts in promoting wise eating habits, deserve a sizable share of the credit for whatever improvement has taken place in public health.

And apparently there has been some impression made on Mrs. Housewife that a well-balanced diet is essential–

One of our recent important developments in diets is a diet for the "sure, I feel great" person who wants to maintain his present tip-top feeling.

These spirited souls are the ones, I think, who generally neglect their dietary needs. They feel so good now they don't even think about their diet and its effect on their future well-being. I've just one word to give them. Science has gone a long way in lengthening life expectancy, isolating germs, developing preventive medicine and cures and perfecting surgical methods. Science has also stressed the importance of a well-balanced diet in maintaining physical well-being throughout life.

What you eat now, while you're in your 20's and 30's and "feeling great" determines whether those extra years science has given you will be a curse or a blessing.

Eat Wisely While Well

EAT WISELY now while you're feeling shipshape, so you'll continue that way. Be sure you include every day a pint of milk, two servings of fruits, one to be citrus; an egg, a serving of whole grain cereal, two protein-rich foods like meat, chicken, fish or cheese, three servings of vegetables, one green or yellow, and some bread with butter or margarine.

But above all, eat breakfast—for that's the most important meal of the day, for adults as well as children. I am constantly amazed at the number of intelligent women who think that a kiss and a pat on the back is enough to start their husband's day off right.

Sorry, but that's not enough! Husbands need food in their stomachs in the morning so they can bring home the bacon at night.

Easy to Prepare

THERE'S no trick to preparing a nourishing hot breakfast in nothing flat. Our kitchen has worked out a breakfast menu, containing the foods authorities agree are essential for the normal person—fruit, toast, butter milk and cereal—which can be prepared in less than 5 minutes. Some food editors tried it out, too, and beat the record. They whipped it up in 3 1/3 minutes. It is with time-saving in mind that our company markets an "instant" cereal and other companies produce other "instant" foods, as coffee, cocoas, and juices.

Of course, I don't advocate eating in a hurry when you don't have to. My favorite form of entertaining is a leisurely Sunday night supper for friends in my apartment overlooking beautiful Forest Park in St. Louis. My favorite recipe is Ralston Spoon Bread, an easy, appetizing dish. With this I serve, if it's cool weather cranberry juice cocktail, bite-size Shredded Ralston snacks, pork chops with apple rings, buttered frozen green peas, chocolate ice cream and cookies; in warm weather, tomato stuffed with chicken salad, pickles and olives, iced coffee and apple pie a la mode.

Here's that favorite recipe for spoon bread:

RALSTON SPOON BREAD

- 2 cups milk
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ½ cup Hot Ralston cereal, uncooked
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 eggs, separated

Heat milk to boiling. Add salt and sugar. Stir in cereal so slowly boiling does not stop. Boil slowly 5 minutes, stirring often. Remove from heat. Stir in butter. Cover and let cool for 10 minutes. Stir slowly into well-beaten egg yolks. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into greased 1½-quart baking dish. Set in pan containing ½ inch hot water. Bake in moderately slow oven (350°) 45 minutes, or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Serve with spoon hot from baking dish directly to dinner plate. Add a little butter and eat with a fork. Makes 4 servings.

Note: To use Instant Ralston increase amount of cereal to 2/3 cup and boil only 10 seconds.

Other recipes popular with my guests include:

STUFFED PEPPERS

- 4 small green peppers
- ¾ cup lean ground beef
- 1½ tablespoons shortening
- 2 tablespoons finely cut onion
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons finely cut celery
- 1/3 cup Ry-Krisp crumbs (6 wafers)
- 1/3 cup drained, canned tomatoes

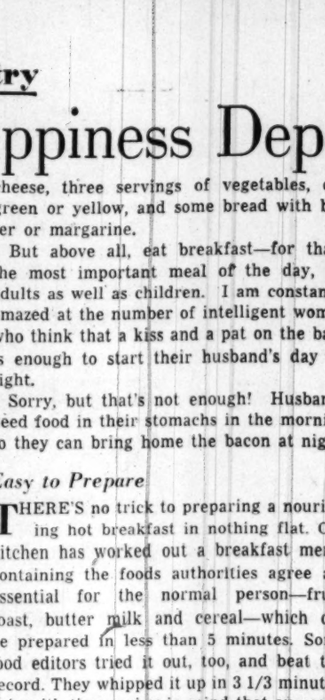
Remove top and seeds from green peppers. Cover with boiling water; cook for 5 minutes. Drain. Brown meat in hot shortening. Add onion, celery, crumbs, tomatoes and salt. Stuff peppers with meat mixture. Stand peppers upright in baking dish containing an inch of hot water. Cover and bake in moderately slow oven (350°) for 1 hour. Serves 4.

RALSTON SCRAPPLE

Pork sausage, bulk	½ lb.
Milk or water	2½ cups
Salt	¼ teaspoon
Pepper	⅛ teaspoon
Hot (Regular) Ralston Cereal, uncooked	2/3 cup
Flour	¼ cup
Fat (for browning slices)

Cook sausage, stirring with fork until brown. Drain off fat. Add liquid, salt and pepper; heat to boil. Stir in cereal so slowly boiling does not stop. Boil 5 minutes, stirring often. Pour at once into wet medium loaf pan. Chill until firm (4 to 6 hours). Unmold; cut into ½ inch slices; roll in flour. Brown on both sides in ⅛ inch of hot fat. Serve with syrup or honey if desired. Makes 14 ½ inch slices.

Note: Ground raw beef or veal can replace sausage if meat is cooked in 2 tablespoons fat and salt is increased to 1½ teaspoons. Instant Ralston Cereal can be used if amount is increased to 1 cup.



MISS ELSPETH BENNETT

WHAT you should eat and why is an open secret to Elspeth Bennett. As manager of the nutrition service department of Ralston Purina Co., St. Louis, Mo., she concentrates on helping consumers achieve a better diet. First-hand experience has taught her its necessity and she has had fine training in the field.

A graduate of the University of Tennessee, she also received a master's degree in nutrition from Columbia Teachers' College. For five years she was director of nutrition for the Department of Public Health of Kentucky. Later she served as assistant director of the home economics department of the City of New York Emergency Relief Bureau. For seven years she was assistant director of food and nutrition at Syracuse University.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Dear Boss:

If you don't indulge in any bad habits like tobacco, whisky or motor cars, Canada is a wonderful place for bargain-conscious American tourists.

Wherever you go, your U. S. dollar is worth $1.10 in Canadian money. Most prices would be "reasonable" even without the exchange premium, and the food here is especially cheap—and good.

But the pack of Camels that costs a fraction over 16 cents in Washington sets you back 45 cents in the Dominion. Canadian smokes, strange to our taste, are 36 cents.

"Try Philip Morris," one clerk suggested. "They're made here, so they're only 36 cents, but they taste like your American Philip Morris." I hate to dispute his word, but they don't taste the same to me.

We filled up with gasoline in Detroit before crossing the bridge into Canada. The price was 26 cents per gallon. On the Canadian side, the same brand is 42 cents a gallon. However, it should be mentioned that the imperial gallon is about 20 percent larger than our gallon.

Most American motor cars are now either made or assembled in Canada, and a glance at prices seems to indicate that they're not too much higher than those in the States—especially considering the exchange premium.

Yet we're struck by the relatively small proportion of Ontario license tags we see on the road, in comparison with the many tourist tags from just about every one of the 48 States. And by the smaller number of post-war autos owned by Canadians.

On the other hand, there are far more bicycles here. An ancient postman, sedately pedaling his bike with the Royal Mail slung over his shoulder, is a sight you'll see in practically any village or town.

Canadian liquor is reasonably priced, but hard stuff from this country runs high. Incidentally, average whisky prices in St. Louis were about 50 cents per bottle higher than in the District, but Chicago (which used to be a cut-rate town with lots of price wars) is now sky high. On several brands I checked, the difference was almost $2 per bottle.

The drive from Windsor to Hamilton, Ont., was delightful, except for our overnight stop, about which more later.

The beautiful scenery, the well-kept lawns, the bright new ramblers spotted among the traditional British architecture and the quaint roadside signs (a Leamington butcher's reads: "We hae meat ye can eat") combine to make the trip along the King's Highway a memorable experience for first-time visitors.

This is $1000-an-acre farm country, and looks it. Specialties are tobacco, tomatoes, cabbage and other early vegetables.

We sampled a half-dozen of those home-grown vegetables when we had our dinner at the Leamington Hotel, and I didn't recall ever eating tastier food in any public dining room. Or in more attractive surroundings.

It's a pine-paneled room, at one end of which stands a large pine sideboard filled with Wedgwood and Royal Doulton china. The plate ledge which lines the wall holds a fine collection of pewter and copper tankards and trays—and of course a full color picture of the King is in the place of honor above the door. On each table there's a vase of fresh flowers.

We had the most expensive dinners on the menu—$2 each, Canadian. The portions were huge, the courses many, and the food delicious.

An excerpt from the menu may be of interest to District Liners. After noting that the Plate Room is open each afternoon for tea, it adds: "Ladies will find the side entrance most convenient."

A heavy rain caught up with us en route to Hamilton, and Bernice hauled out the booklet we'd been handed at the border tourist information office.

"The Twentieth Century Motor Court is just ahead," she said, "and they make a great point of the fact that it has inside plumbing and is modern in every way. Let's stop there."

To my sorrow, boss, we did.

Aside from the bed, there were two pieces of furniture in each cabin ($10 for the two)—a tiny night table, and a straight-backed chair.

The walls and ceilings were covered with wee beasties later identified as flies, spiders, mosquitoes and assorted uncatalogued bugs.

The heat was insufferable, because the only ventilation came from an opening approximately 20 inches wide and 6 inches high. A small window in the back, which might have permitted some air to circulate in the cabins was nailed shut.

We opened our suitcases on the floor because there was no other place to put them.

"Now there's no place to stand," observed Bernice. "You wash up while I unpack."

I turned on the hot-water faucet, then leaped back in fright as it spat at me. Not water, but air.

The cold water ran pretty well, but when I gingerly tried the hot a few more times, it continued to snarl its defiance.

So we washed in cold water and went to bed, but not to sleep. We had established our beach head, but the mosquitoes counterattacked all night long. And by morning we were glad to "disengage the enemy," as Jack Norris might put it, and withdraw with only minor casualties.

All I can say, boss, is that the fellow who wrote that blurb in the tourist book ought to be given a saliva test, or maybe a few lessons in truthful reporting.

Bill.

P. S. On second thought, maybe we just didn't understand his lingo. Up here, trucks are "transports," nylons with imperfections are "subs" instead of seconds, a taxpayer is a "ratepayer," "honey dew" is a drink, not a melon and a "drawback" is a refund. The King's English can be slightly confusing at times.

Tobey Faces Bitter Opposition

By Drew Pearson

At a recent cocktail party, a tall, handsome guest with a slight drawl and polished manner, stepped up to Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

Sen. Tobey

"We are really going to get that colleague of yours from New Hampshire," he said. "When the Republican primary is over your friend Tobey isn't going to know what hit him."

And he went on to tell at some length about his plans to defeat Tobey.

Senator Smith's friend was Roger Whiteford, a top Washington attorney; the Senator to whom Whiteford referred was GOP veteran Charles Tobey, now fighting for his life in the New Hampshire primaries.

Behind this cocktail conversation was something which is axiomatic in politics—namely, "your friends may forget you at election time, but your enemies never."

This axiom, incidentally, is having important impact on the make-up and caliber of the United States Senate.

In this particular instance, it happened that, 10 long years ago, Senator Tobey called Roger Whiteford before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and subjected him to a grueling cross-examination regarding payoffs made in 1932 by the giant Radio Corporation of America to call off an antitrust case against RCA, the National Broadcasting Co. and affiliates.

Hoover Said 'No'

Whiteford in 1932 was a Washington attorney for the Radio Corporation, and thanks to Senator Tobey's grueling cross-examination, it was disclosed that RCA had hired GOP Senator George Moses of New Hampshire to squelch the case. But Herbert Hoover, then President, flatly refused to favor the Radio Corporation, and so did William D. Mitchell, his Attorney General.

Whereupon the Radio Corporation hired Senator Dan Hastings of Delaware, a member of the executive committee of the Republican National Committee, who was paid a fee of $7500, of which, according to the testimony, $2500 was passed on to the clerk of the United States District Court in Wilmington, Del. That fixed the antitrust case.

The clerk induced Judge John P. Nields, appointed to the bench through Senator Hastings, to postpone the antitrust case, following which the Justice Department finally let RCA off with a consent decree.

The evidence was truly shocking. It showed that one of the Nation's most influential corporations had resorted to political fixing and bribery to get an antitrust case called off. And had it not been for the persistent sleuthing of Senator Tobey, the facts probably would still be buried.

Now, 10 years later, it appears from Roger Whiteford's conversation with Senator Smith that the chickens hatched by Senator Tobey's fearless perseverance are coming home to roost. For the opposition against him in the New Hampshire primary is such that he may lose.

Contest in Utah

Tobey's opposition is similar to that which has lined up against other courageous Senators this year. In Utah, for instance, the National Association of Manufacturers has helped nominate its former president in opposition to Senator Elbert Thomas, and may defeat him. Thomas, as chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, drafted the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and went all-out for labor. Now big business is retaliating against an enemy while labor is slow in going to bat for a friend.

Similar forces were lined up against Senator Claude Pepper in Florida and Frank Graham in North Carolina—two men who had the courage to fight for the Negro and for labor. And whether you agree with either of these Senators, even their enemies have to admit that it takes courage to champion the Negro in Florida and North Carolina. Both Senators were defeated in this year's primaries.

New Hampshire's Tobey now appears to be next on the list. And again, whether you agree with Tobey or not, his enemies also have to admit that he has courage.

He was, for instance, the one Republican who led the fight against confirmation of Truman's close pal, big oilman Ed Pauley, to be Undersecretary of the Navy, at a time when Truman was at the peak of his popularity. Most Republicans did not relish bucking the President then, but Tobey forced Pauley to withdraw his name for the Navy post. And Pauley promptly vowed to "get" the man who defeated him—at the next election.

Probe of Textron

Tobey also stood up against one of the most powerful industrial concerns in his home State, Textron, which owns some 20 textile mills in New England. Staging one of its biggest operations in Tobey's biggest voting area, Manchester, Textron had powerful friends, and the probe was not popular.

As a result of his courageous fight, however, it was discovered that the family of Textron's president, Royal Little, had made heavy personal profits that should have gone to the stockholders. A profit of $700,000 for the Little family was made on buying and selling the Newmarket Mill at Lowell, Mass., with another large personal profit on the Suncook Mill in New Hampshire.

These were profits that should have gone into dividends, not to the Little family. The evidence was so glaring that, before a court could rule, Little stepped in and offered to refund stockholders $600,000.

Charlie Tobey, now 70 years old, has been campaigning with the vigor of a man aged 50. But he has been fighting almost single-handed, while his opponent, a young former secretary of Senator Styles Bridges, appears to be well-heeled with campaign funds.

Money and influence being what it is in politics today, Tobey will probably lose unless there is a big turnout of votes. But though powerful New Hampshire publishers are against Tobey, this columnist does not propose to let him finish his fight without paying tribute to a grand old man who has had the courage of his convictions; and to express the opinion that if Senators who have had the courage to step on important people's toes continue to be defeated, we may have a Congress of men who spend their time bowing from the waist in the presence of big campaign contributors.

The unfortunate warning to younger Senators is that if you want to be reelected in this day and age, you should abandon having the courage of your convictions.
